PARISHIONERS URGE CHURCH JURY TO DROP TEA ROOM GIRL CHARGE

A delegation of New Bedford men and women carried to the Methodist-Episcopal conference at South Manchester, Ct., today a petition asking for retention of the Rev. Guy Willis Holmes as a New Bedford pastor.

The delegation arrived at South Manchester just before the minister appeared before a jury of clergymen to answer serious charges preferred by Ambrogio Fortin, 22-year-old New Bedford tea room girl.

"Tony" Fortin went before the Suffolk county grand jury yesterday and told her story as part of an investigation begun by that body.

The petition asking retention of the minister was signed by 1,500 members of his Pleasant street Methodist Episcopal Church in New Bedford and other New Bedford residents, it was reported.

Mrs. Holmes, wife of the minister, was to have headed the delegation, but she suffered a nervous collapse and today went in bed in care of a physician.

All day yesterday she canvassed her husband's parish for signatures.

The hearing before a jury of clergymen was to determine whether the tea rooms girl's charges should be placed before the main conference.

Not until today, however, when copies of the Boston Evening American arrived, containing the exclusive "own story" of the girl, did the conference, other than church officials, learn the full extent of her charges.

SHOT FIRED IN AUTO CHASE

Thomas Farrell and George D. Sturgeon, 16 and 18 years old, of Brookline, were captured in Allston today after an auto chase which ended when Patrolman Campbell fired a shot from his gun. The machine crashed into the parked automobile of Councillor Frederick W. Dowling. The boys were found guilty of using an automobile without authority and were placed on probation.

If you want a piano, radio set, automobile, and you know you can pay for it, get it NOW and enjoy it while you pay.

The rich buy real estate and stocks on instalments. A good automobile is worth more than a house.

THE IMPORTANT THING is that instalment business should be on a sound basis, not encouraging extravagance, charging excessive rates for time payments, or encouraging a man with a car, good for two or three years more, to get rid of it prematurely and glut the used-car market.

What hurts is waste, not spending.

3 CHUMS VANISH ON WAY TO HIGH SCHOOL

Three fifteen-year-old Somerville junior high school girls were reported as missing to the police today, after their parents had frantically conducted a search in secret for three days.

The girls, who disappeared while on their way to school Tuesday morning, are Jane Leahy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Leahy of Somerville avenue; Margaret Barry of Atherton street and Margaret Haggerty of Monmouth street.

They were last seen boarding a trolley car bound for Cambridge on Somerville avenue. All were hatless and carried their school books.

The girls were chums, and the Leahy and Barry girls were members of the graduating class at the South Junior High School, having been classmates for several years. Margaret Haggerty was an eighth grade pupil in the same school.

Chief of Police Charles A. Kendall notified the authorities of all surrounding cities and towns to be on the lookout for the missing girls.

ARREST 6 CHILDREN IN PASSAIC STRIKE

Passaic, N. J., April 9 (A.P.).—Six children, four boys and two girls, who police said were creating much of the disturbance in the picket line of striking textile workers at Botany Mill, were arrested today.

They were taken before Judge William H. Davidson, who held Louise Bochne, 17, for the day, and released the others with warnings. Police said the children booed and hissed at the approach of the officers.

Nancy Sandowsky, 19, active among the strikers, today was sentenced to 60 days in jail on a charge of using abusive language to an officer.

CONNECTICUT UP 2 FT.; SPRING FLOOD COMING

Turners Falls, April 9 (A.P.).—The Connecticut River rose two feet in a few hours today, the steady rains of the past two days and the warmer weather combining to swell the rush of water from the upper branches.

The ice in the mill pond, which has resisted breaking up until now, has moved out as far north as the mouth of the Millers River.

Much of it went through the canal head gates and Chief Engineer Dean had a force of men busy today keeping the ice away from the racks at the various mill water gates.

Mr. Bean expects the main spring flood within the next few days, he stated this morning, and he has made all preparations to care for it.

SERIES OPENS IN SUNSHINE

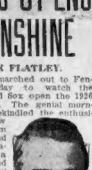
By NICK FLATLEY.

Boston fans marched out to Fenway Park today to watch the Braves and Red Sox open the 1926 baseball season. The genial morning sunshine rekindled the enthusiasm that a few days of storm had killed, and the early invasion indicated a fairly large and very noisy crowd.

Boston fans were more than anxious to greet the Braves, who made such a sensational record in the South, to cheer the new Red Sox, who have been rebuilt enough to give the boys real hope of quick escape from the bottom of the league.



Nick Flatley.

The ball yard was in fairly good shape, though there were soft and soggy spots in the outfield. The infield has been covered for the past week and was in good trim when the tarpaulin was removed for the preliminary practice.

Both teams were anxious for the

ARREST 2 SONS OF PLUNKETT

Dublin, April 9 (A.P.).—The home of Count Plunkett, noted Republican deputy, was raided early today. His sons, George and Owen, were aroused from their beds and taken to a police station.

A large military force guarded the house while detectives removed the sons and searched the premises from top to bottom. Both sons were later released. Police said they had been arrested on suspicion of complicity in a recent armed assault.

Count Plunkett.

George Noble Plunkett has been closely identified with the Irish Republic set up by Eamon De Valera in opposition to the British administration which preceded the founding of the Free State. He is versed in literature and art, and a member of most of the learned societies of Europe.

His home was raided by national troops in November, 1922, and a large quantity of explosives seized. One of his sons was executed after the Easter Rebellion of 1916, and Count Plunkett himself was imprisoned for a short time.

ARRESTED IN HUB FOR AUBURN, ME., POLICE

Clare Nickerson, alias Ralph Elliott, was arrested today by police of the East Dedham street station at a rooming house in Worcester square on complaint of authorities of Auburn, Me. Nickerson, according to police, is wanted on charges of assaulting a deputy sheriff of Auburn, two charges of liquor law violations, and reckless driving. A woman giving the name of Nellis Elliott was arrested with Nickerson.

RUSH TO NEW DIAMOND FIELDS IN SOUTH AFRICA

Johannesburg, South Africa, April 9 (A.P.).—The Transvaal region near Lydenberg, south of the Witwatersrand mountains, was the scene today of a final rush to the newly-discovered diamond fields. The stampede included not only adventurers and oil for domestic purposes," the and unemployed, but professional men and farmers.

COAL RECEIPTS IN BIG DROP

Anthracite receipts in New England during the year ended March 31 fell off approximately 2,000,000 tons compared with receipts in the previous year, statistics compiled by the commission on the necessaries of life disclose.

On the other hand receipts of bituminous coal increased about 2,000,000 tons. Commenting on the anthracite deficit, the commission points out that in addition to the decrease in receipts, the carry-over stocks amounted to about 1,500,000 tons on April 1, 1925, while the carry-over stocks of anthracite on April 1, 1926, were sub-normal.

"The shortage of American anthracite resulted in increasing materially the use of coke, briquettes and oil for domestic purposes," the report reads.

For comparative purposes, coal receipts in New England for two years were:

| | Net tons Anthracite | Net tons Bituminous |
|---|---|---|
| April 1, 1924, to March 31, 1925. | 10,181,074 | 19,634,445 |

LABOR IN DEFI TO DRYS | FOR NATION-WIDE VOTE ON BEER, WINES ISSUE

Washington, April 9 (A.P.).—Challenging the prohibition forces to a showdown at the ballot box on modification of the Volstead act, spokesmen for the American Federation of Labor told the Senate liquor committee today that the workingman wants beer and wine, and would be better off if he had them.

Called to the witness stand by the wets, as they neared the end of the week allotted to them for presentation of their testimony, a succession of officials of the Federation and several of its departments pronounced the present law a failure, declared it favored the rich at the expense of the poor, and predicted that a nation referendum would show a majority for a change.

Their testimony ran a wide range. It touched on the ability of Governor Smith to get re-elected on a wet platform in New York, on irregularities in prohibition and politics in Ohio, and on the conditions among seamen in Portland, Ore.

Some of the labor spokesmen opposed the return of the saloon, but they united in asking for beer and wine.

A picturesque chapter of the testimony was recited by Andrew Furuseth, veteran chief of the Seamen's Union, who said that he himself had been a prohibitionist, but had taken to wine after he reached sixty years.

Undoubtedly, he said, the "rakings and scrapings of hell and bedlam" that make up the rank and file of "us seamen," would be bet-

OIL FLAMES MENACE HOMES IN EVERETT

A two-alarm fire of undetermined origin drove a score of persons from their homes, caused damage estimated at $20,000, and aroused fear of general conflagration, when the oil plant of the White-Hodge Company in Wellington street, Everett, was destroyed early today.

The blaze was discovered by Patrolman Frederick E. Shilling, who sounded the alarm, and, according to Chief Ham, may have been caused by spontaneous combustion or a short circuit in the wiring system.

Barrels containing grease and oil were burned by the wholesale. Sparks shot skyward and floated to the roofs of neighboring tenement houses where women and children fled into the streets.

The nearest dwelling, only a hundred feet way from the burning building, was wet down so as to be saved from taking fire. Smoke seeped into the windows of adjoi-

Crushed under a ton of salt that fell twenty-five feet when a winch on a gear slipped, Michael T. Kelley, fifty, a longshoreman, of No. 193 Marion street, East Boston, was almost instantly killed at Mystic Wharf, Charlestown, today.

Kelley, who was employed by Quinn Brothers, contractors, was unloading salt from the steamship Albert W. Fejer. Workmen extricated Kelley from the heavy mass and he was taken to the Haymarket Relief Hospital, where it was found he was dead.

FOIL BROWNING'S PLAN TO WED 2ND CINDERELLA

New York, April 9 (Universal).—"The marriage between E. W. Browning and the little schoolgirl, Frances Heenan, will never take place."

State Senator Benjamin Antin, who arrived here from Albany, declared his child marriage bill, which has been passed by the Senate, will become a law in time to prevent the contemplated wedding of Brown ing and the girl.

"As chairman of the State Children's Welfare Commission," he said, "I am interested in seeing that this thing is stopped. I am here to assist Superintendent Vincent Pisarra, of the Children's Society, in every way that I can. If he needs any backing I'm here to give it. and amazement was expressed on all sides.

27 MINISTERS ON JURY.

The jury that heard the Rev. Mr. Holmes in his defence was made up of seventeen ministers, announced as follows:

The foreman from Business of Business John W. Adams, East Weymouth; Robert L. Abbott, Fall River; William A. Wood, Concord; Ruel E. Gurney, Providence; J. Creeger, Taunton; George W. Manning, Bourne; W. H. Bath, East Providence; James F. Blake, Plymouth; R. S. Moore, Providence; W. I. Ward, North Carver; W. E. Paxton, Connecticut; J. E. Duxbury, Manchester, Ct.; J. G. Stills, Mystic, Ct.; P. C. Baker, Connecticut; H. H. Crawford, Arnold's Mills, Ct., and J. E. Montgomery, Nantic, Ct.

PASTOR IN DILEMMA

Should the grand jury find against the preacher he will has his day in court, but the ruling of the church court at South Manchester, Connecticut, is virtually final.

From an adverse decision by the ministerial rulers today the pastor's hope of vindication would be in a reconsideration of his case by the general conference of Methodists, which convenes but once in four years, and the Holmes-Fortin case would have been written into church history by the time such a reconsideration would be possible.

It was not expected that "Tony of the Tearoom" would make a personal appearance before the trial board, but her deposition accusing the young minister is the principal weapon of the prosecution.

HOLMES CONFIDENT

The witnesses called include two of the official board of Pastor Holmes' church to whom the girl told her story, after which a settlement was made, according to the report.

Unofficial reports here have it that this settlement was $250, and that the sum was raised by the Ku Klux Klan.

As he faced the ordeal that has so great a bearing on his whole future, the young minister's only comment, when asked his feelings, was: "Physically I am not as well as I might be; morally I am perfect."

12,000 CASES OF 'REAL STUFF' FOR HUB

With the Volstead modification bearing under way at Washington, the Boston Evening American learned today that a cargo of some of the finest liquor to reach this country since prohibition, has just been landed near Boston.

Th eshipment consisted of 12,000 cases of the choicest cordials, wines, Scotch, rye, and Booth's Old Tom gin. The landing was made after months of effort.

Two hundred and fifty-four cases of the lot were seized by State constabulary on Monday at a Summer camp at Conanicut Point, Essex, where it had been temporarily cached. The remainder, at prices ranging from $65 a case for Booth gin to $100 for rye and Scotch, is on sale, principally in Boston.

It was learned that the ship carrying this cargo arrived on Rum Row during Christmas week. At that time the Coast Guard authorities were extremely active, so the captain of the vessel lost patience and went to Lunenberg, N. S. After remaining there for some time he returned to local waters and the cargo was landed.

had dinner there at the Casino and he always carried a quart bottle of wine with him for us to drink. I partook of a small amount of it and he also partook of a small amount. I do not know what wine it was, but it was very good wine.

"GOOD SPORT."

ANTOINETTE FORTIN.

He was a good sport. I also danced with him once at the Twin Elms, a short distance from Providence. We had dinner that night at the Twin Elms. There was a party of four along that night. The Rev. Mr. Holmes used his car.

His friend, Mr. Smith, and a girl cousin of Mr. Holmes, whose first name I recall was Olive, made up the party. We did not have any wine that night at dinner. We danced until 12 o'clock, when the place closed and then we returned home to New Bedford. We left the girl in Providence, where she lived.

NICE PLACES.

The Twin Elms, as well as the Bristol Casino, both roadhouses, were very nice places and well managed. I had a good time each time I went there, as the dancing floors and orchestras were good.

My friendship with him continued until Christmas time. I did not talk to any person except Mr. Holmes about our relations until about three weeks ago, when I consulted an attorney.

As a result of my experience with the Rev. Mr. Holmes, I would advise all young girls to carefully investigate before going out anywhere even to a dance with a young man. Determine just who he is, whether he is single or married and what his intentions are.

'Tony' Tells About Pastor's Parties

This is the second, and concluding, instalment of Antoinette Fortin's own story, written exclusively for the Boston Evening American by the twenty-two-year-old New Bedford tea room girl whose serious charges, growing out of her friendship with the Rev. Guy Willis Holmes, New Bedford minister, are being investigated by the Suffolk County Grand Jury.

By Antoinette Fortin

The Rev. Mr. Holmes was a very nice man to talk with and talked so nicely to me that I placed implicit confidence in what he said, so that when he told me that night in July that he was a married man and had four children, I was greatly surprised.

I told him I was very much surprised at his actions and that I did not want to meet him any more, but he pleaded with me so hard that I agreed to meet him and a few days later we went to a dance.

He was a very fine dancer and could dance the jazz numbers just as well as any man I ever danced with.

One of the places that we frequently went to was the Bristol Casino. We always went in his car and he always attended in a business suit so that no one knew he was a minister.

and a man old enough to be her grandfather."

HEARING TODAY.

Senator Antin remained in New York to be on hand when Mrs. Heenan and her daughter appear in Children's Court today for the hearing, which was postponed because of the illness of the girl.

"Bunny" Browning slipped completely out of the picture, leaving "Peaches" and her mother to face the official music alone. All his office callers were told that Browning has sailed for Europe. A very exasperated secretary repeated over and over that "Mr. Browning has nothing to do with the matter."

DENIES FISARRA'S REQUEST.

"The matter," referred to Mrs. Catherine Heenan's visit to the Children's Court. "Peaches" had also been summoned for a hearing by Superintendent Vincent Fisarra, head of the Children's Society, who charged her with juvenile delinquency. The mother was charged with being an unfit guardian for her daughter.

Fisarra's request for an order prohibiting the marriage of the young girl to Browning was denied. Justice Hoyt said that since the child marriages bill, proposed by Senator Antin, was not yet passed the assembly in Albany, he has not jurisdiction over the matter.

Washington, April 9 (A.P.).—Secretary Kellogg has advised the House Foreign Affairs Committee that proper protection is being afforded in Germany to American property owners against the activities of the Schutzverband, an organization to foster litigation for recovery for German citizens, German real estate purchased by American citizens. The information was in response to a House resolution sponsored by Representative Woodrum, Democrat, Virginia.

'HIT ME IN EYE!' WIFE SAYS; WINS DECREE

In a gorgeous mink wrap and a shimmering turban that snuggled around her handsome head and hid all but two curls of her blonde tresses, Mrs. Carrie M. Badger, of Boston aired her marital troubles from the witness stand in Suffolk Divorce Court today. She won a decree nisi, and the right to her maiden name.

The suit against her husband, Ogden W. Badger, also of Boston, was brought on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment, and was uncontested.

A subdued chorus of admiring "oh's!" went up from the courtroom spectators as Mrs. Badger made her way to the witness chair.

Mrs. Badger, whose testimony indicated she is familiarly called "Honey," said her husband flitted out of his own class to a different sphere when he landed a good job. The job went to his head, she said, and he began to go out with a "nifty bunch," and his habits became irregular.

"He hit me in the eye in the kitchen," she testified. The attack occurred, she said, when her husband came to her sister's house and demanded food between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning.

Foul play is feared by the families of the girls, although for nearly three days they had expected the girls would return and explain their absence.

Principal George Wadsworth of the South Junior High School could throw no light on their absence, explaining that all three were up in their school work and would be promoted in June.

Schoolmates and a resident on Somerville avenue who knew the girls, saw them board the car Tuesday instead of continuing on to the school, which is in Vinal avenue, in the Union square section.

ing hoseman but the arrival of Malay fire apparatus warned people out in time before they were overcome.

Flames broke through the roof of the blazing building and could be seen for miles. Windows blew out from hot air explosions and endangered the lives of firemen.

Chief Philip Ham directed the work of the fire forces and brought the fire in check after about an hour of fighting. Noticeable work was done by Engine No. 1 Company, the chief's headquarters station.

The first alarm came by telephone. A neighbor, aroused by hot air explosions in the building, saw the structure a mass of flame. Fire could be seen through every window.

The first box alarm was registered at 4:47 a. m. and the second was pulled in two minutes later. Chief Ham saw that tenement houses were in immediate danger of burning and turned in the second bell.

The White-Hodge factory, separated from the thickly congested tenement area by the Boston & Maine railroad tracks, is of wood construction. It was well-filled with barreled oil and was burning briskly when the first companies reached the scene.

Although the firemen suffered considerably from smoke and were hampered in their work because of its denseness, none was overcome or injured. Thousands of tons of water were emptied into the building. The cause is being investigated.

BROOKLINE BOYS ARE HALTED BY A BULLET

Two Brookline boys faced their home district court today, brought there only after a policeman's bullet halted their mad break for liberty by automobile.

G. D. Sturgeon, of No. 51 Cameron street, and Thomas Farrell, of No. 81 Pedri street, were charged with breaking and entering into the old gas house yard on Brookline avenue, and stealing the automobile of Mrs. Mary Miller of Brookline.

Patrolman Homer W. Campbell saw the boys in a car which had previously been reported stolen. He gave chase in a commandeered car, and when he fired one shot over the head of his quarry, the boys abandoned the machine and started across lots. The fleet patrolman soon ran them down.

'PUSSYFOOT' CONFESSES IN INTERNATIONAL

"Did I ever drink to promote prohibition?"

It's "Pussyfoot" Johnson speaking. Listen to his answer.

"Yes, gallons of it," he declares. He admits he likes the taste of liquor but never drinks it except for the reason indicated above.

Thus in the May issue of "Hearst International-Cosmopolitan Magazine" does the famed William E. Johnson lay bare the secrets of mission and tells as the title of his article indicates, "How I Had to Lie, Bribe and Drink to Put Over Prohibition in America."

Psalm singing "didn't get me anywhere," Johnson says, so he had to resort to underworld tactics.

"Did I ever lie to promote prohibition" he asks himself. "Decidedly yes. I have told enough lies for the cause to make Ananias ashamed of himself."

And he bribed bad men, took, did pussyfoot in those strenuous years of campaigning, but he bribed them "to give me information about their associates."

The reformer paints himself in an heroic role when he was sent to supress liquor traffic among Oklahoma Indians. In the battles that followed, eight deputies and twenty-five outlaws were slain but "Pussyfoot" came out unharmed except for a broken finger joint.

TRAGEDIES OF TWO-GUN MAN DAVIS—A 16-year-old boy totes a brace of revolvers to school with him, to resist discipline, his father backs him up, Pa shoots at the woman teacher, who is also handy with her gun—and Pa is in his grave! ## PSALM-SINGING FUTILE, SO "PUSSYFOOT" LIES, DRINKS AND BRIBES TO MAKE U. S. DRY

ONE EYE IS ALL YOU NEED TO SPOT BOOZE
I'VE DRUNK GALLONS OF IT AND I LIED BETTER THAN ANANIAS
MADE A LITTLE HOOCH MYSELF
THIS PLACE JUST SUITS ME

A resentful crowd in England closed an eye for "Pussyfoot," but in his story of how he "put over prohibition" in America, he declares that one is enough to carry out his purpose of making the whole world dry.

The end justifies the means, according to "Pussyfoot's" remarkable story, appearing in the May issue of Hearst's International Cosmopolitan Magazine, and he admits that he has drunk often to obtain evidence.

"Pussyfoot's" confessions are amazing as indicated by the title of his story, "How I Had to Lie, Bribe and Drink to Put Over Prohibition in America." And he admits he likes the taste of liquor.

Monshiners would have a formidable rival if "Pussyfoot" ever turned distiller. "Psalm-singing never got me anywhere," he says, so he learned every ramification of the illicit liquor industry in order to combat it the better.

On his trip around the world, "Pussyfoot" could not help but like a region as "dry" as the Sahara and an animal that can go for seven days without a drink.

CEREMONY TO BE AT BOSTON COLLEGE

Miss Anna K. O'Connell Will Become the Bride of Back Bay Doctor Next Week

In the yellow glow of a Southern moon and the Mediterranean blue of a rolling painted ocean, a romance was born in Boston's Catholic pilgrimage to Rome that was climaxed today with announcement that Cardinal O'Connell's niece will wed.

She is Miss Anna K. O'Connell of No 107 Waban Hill road, Newton, and on next Wednesday she will marry Dr. John G. Downing of No. 520 Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay, one of the Cardinal's personal suite during the Holy Year pilgrimage.

"Yes, it was the pilgrimage that did it," Miss O'Connell admitted today, indicating that the doctor, young as "medicos" go, worshipped more at this one shrine than at those others to which he had started originally.

The marriage will take place in the chapel of Boston College, the alma mater of Dr. Downing, and Cardinal O'Connell will officiate at the solemn nuptial mass at 10 o'clock, with Mgr. Richard J. Haberlin, diocesan chancellor, assisting.

Matron of honor will be Mrs. Mary L. Ryan, sister of the bride-to-be, and two other sisters, Mrs. Edward A. McLaughlin, Jr., and Miss Josephine O'Connell, will be bridesmaids. Harry Downing, brother of the doctor, will be best man.

Miss O'Connell was educated both in Boston and abroad. She is a member of the Aristos Club Guild of the Infant Savior and many other organizations of the younger set.

Her prospective husband is a son of the late Timothy Downing and was graduated from Boston College and Harvard Medical School. Following the pilgrimage last year that won him his bride of next Wednesday, he remained for a time on the continent, studying under European medical "well-knowns" and at clinics.

FLEE MENACE IN OIL FIRE

Dorothy Klaus and Frances Urbana of No. 8 Wellington street, Everett, who were among the many persons driven out by fire which swept the paint plant of the White-Hedge Company today.

Miss Hazel Esterbrook of No. 36 West street, Everett, and her dog, King. It was King that aroused the neighborhood by his snarls and barks.

Alfred Klaus and Mary Klaus of No. 6 Wellington street, Everett, who were routed from their home when flames destroyed the paint plant and endangered many homes along Wellington street early today.

AMNESIA VICTIM BETTER

Student Never Will Know What He Did In Six Days, Doctors Say

Reunited with his parents, Douglas Robinson, Harvard freshman and son of Theodore Douglas Robinson, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was on his way to Connecticut today to rest and shape plans for his future.

The youth was discharged from St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, N. Y., following a bedside reunion with his parents, after having suffered an attack of amnesia, which leaves his movements for several days a complete mystery.

Doctors at the hospital, who pronounced him well again, did not expect that young Robinson's memory ever would reveal to him the events of the six days between the time he left Harvard and when he was found dazed in Rochester.

GOING TO COUNTRY.

The Robinsons decided to take their son to the country residence of his uncle, at Avon, Ct., with the expectation later of taking him to Washington if he still adheres to his expressed dislike for college.

Mrs. Robinson will remain with Douglas, but the assistant Secretary of the Navy will return to Washington. Upon leaving the hospital, where mother and son embraced each other in a reunion that doctors said was most pathetic, all three went for a time to the home of Thomas G. Spencer, a former college chum of the boy's father.

DISCOUNTS GIRL.

Mr. Robinson said he has made no effort to try to probe his son's memory about events of the days he was "missing," but he was quite sure that the girl, whose photograph the youth carried in his pocket, had nothing to do with the mystery.

"I don't know who she is, but I can hazard a pretty good guess as to her identity," said Mr. Robinson. "I don't think there is any girl connected with this thing."

"Douglas is not engaged, but he has many girl friends."

Douglas Robinson said, while posing for photographs with his parents upon leaving Rochester, that he may decide to return to college after the Spring vacation. His father said he was informed by physicians that tests proved the boy is in perfect health mentally and physically in spite of his experience.

THE LAWRENCE GIRL WHO WAS TOO PRETTY TO WORK WHERE PEOPLE COULD LOOK AT HER.—When her fascinating features caused a traffic jam before her counter, in an Essex Street department store, they moved the unfortunate beauty down into the basement, to wrap packages, and even there everybody stopped work to look at her! At last, however, she appears to have found her place. Read her story, see her pictures, in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

UNWED, SHE LEARNS, 15 YRS. AFTER

Mother of Two Children Finds "Husband" Has Married Her Niece

Lawrence, April 9.—Accompanying police in a raid on a hotel where she believed her husband was living with her niece, Alma Fenchewitz discovered that the man she had livgd with for 15 years was not legally her husband at all, but the lawful mate of the other woman.

Alma Fenchewitz, now the mother of two children, believed that the filing of marriage intentions fifteen years ago by John Groswald, a wealthy Lawrence contractor, constituted a marriage.

HIS HELPMEET.

Through the succeeding years she helped her supposed husband make a place for himself in the business world, and reared the children that were born, only to notice of late the increasing attention that Groswald was paying to her own niece, Ella Gravin.

The niece had come to live with the Groswald family upon arriving in America from her home in Latvia. Later Groswald accompanied the girl on a trip to that country.

THEN THE SHOCK.

Gradually overwhelmed with suspicion that all was not right, the supposed wife took her trouble to the North American Civic League, and after a short period of watchful waiting a raiding party surprised Groswald and the niece at a Lynn hotel.

Then came the denouement. Groswald quickly proving that Miss Gravin became his wife in New York in January, while Alma Fenchewitz was still an unmarried woman as far as he was concerned.

He promised to make amends financially and arrangements are being made for the care of the children, a boy of fourteen and a girl of eleven.

STRIKE OF BUILDING WORKERS SETTLED

A small group of mechanics in the building industry, engaged by Chase & Gilbert, in the completion of a large garage at Bowdoin square, resumed work today after a two-day strike. ### $4,500 for Seaman

A jury in United States District Court awarded $4,500 to George Makinde, a seaman aboard the steamship K. I. Luckenbach, who was badly injured during the unloading of lumber from the vessel at Commonwealth Pier, September 8, 1924.

DOW CREDITORS ACCEPT 10 P. C. SETTLEMENT

With no dissent expressed at the hearing, a majority, both in number and in amount of the creditors of the defunct brokerage firm of C. P. Dow Company, today voted to accept a composition of 10 per cent. on the investments made with the company.

The offer made by the company before Referee Black in Bankruptcy Court was the third suggested since the firm was taken over by a receiver on July 27, 1925, with liabilities estimated at $8,000,000.

The basis on which the creditors' claims were computed was agreed to be as of the amount they had handed over to the company and in its possession on the date of receivership, less any profit accrued on the investments.

In answer to a question from the floor of the courtroom, Bartholomew A. Brickley, receiver, said that the actual cash in hand was $1,100,000, and the amount owed to preferred creditors was between $400,000 and $500,000.

MIDGETS ON HONEYMOON IN ROOM LIKE NURSERY

Savannah, Ga., April 9 (A.P.).—In a bridal suite at the Geiger Hotel fitted with juvenile furniture for the especial occasion, Mr. and Mrs. Matias Martina were "at home" today. Ten thousand persons packed Forsythe Park, where Mayor Hall officiated at the wedding of the couple, members of a troupe of midgets.

DENY MOST CRIMINALS ARE USERS OF DRUGS

Albany, N. Y., April 9 (I.N.S.).—A recent statement by an official of an insurance company that 80 per cent. of the criminals of today were drug addicts, was challenged today by the State Prison Commission. The commission said that of the 1,396 men sent to Sing Sing prison in 1925, only 77, or 5.5 per cent were drug addicts. Only 217 of the 9,358 men sent to the New York County Penitentiary and workhouse last year were users of dope.

TOUGH DAY FOR 3 REPORTERS TOURING HUB

Mistaken many times for New York gunmen, three New Jersey newspaper men succeeded in getting out of Boston today, but only after they had been taken to police headquarters.

The three men, who are employed by a labor paper, asked a Boston Elevated conductor when men were to be paid off at the Neponset car barns. They neglected to tell the motorman that they were gathering data for a labor article, and he promptly reported to Station No. 11 there was going to be a hold-up. Twenty plain clothes men were sent out by Captain Dalley to get the men in the "big green car."

The conductor had noted the number of the car, so every policeman in the city was watching. Special Officer Cornelius Leary was the first to spot the car, and when the men explained their work he gave them a note. T hey were stopped several times and finally put the car up in disgust.

This morning they decided to go home and got as far as Tremont and Beacon streets when the trifle officer halted them. One of the men produced the note, but the traffic officer sent them to headquarters. After talking with Superintendent Crowley they left to make another attempt to get out of town.

HOUSE MEMOIRS WILL NET HIM A MILLION

ROMANCE BEGAN ON VOYAGE TO ROME

ARMS TWISTED, SAYS YOUNG WIFE IN COURT

Testimony that she was kicked while in bed by her husband, that he twisted and blackened her arms, flung furniture about the living room, used vile language and threatened to kill her, was offered today in Middlesex Probate court by Mrs. Ruth Agnes Schroeder of Everett, in her suit for divorce against Dr. Carl Francis Schroeder. Judge Leggat took the case under advisement.

Mrs. Schroeder who is twenty-one, said that as the result of mental and physical suffering inflicted by her husband she was compelled to undergo medical treatment. The suit was uncontested. The Schroeders were married on October 3, 1921.

Singer Is Stung by Scorpion Sent Her In Easter Egg

Paris, April 9 (A.P.).—Juliana Hastrea, young Argentine singer, has been stung on the finger by a scorpion sent her enclosed in an Easter egg.

Mlle. Hastrea, whose home is in Buenos Aires, believed the egg had been sent by a young Japanese woman friend. She opened the box during dinner at a restaurant and was promptly bitten by the scorpion.

She then decided the egg had not been sent her by the Japanese woman and reported the incident to the police.

COAL STRIKE IN BRITAIN LOOMS

London, April 9.—A crisis in the British coal industry seemed certain today when a delegate conference of miners voted to adhere to their policy of opposing wage reductions the lengthening of hours of labor and the substitution of agreements by districts instead of national agreements.

The decision of the conference is tantamount to a rejection of a large portion of the recommendations of the Royal Coal Commission.

The government subsidy expires on May 1, and at that time the operators threaten to reduce wages.

SEEK BODIES OF 35 IN RIVER

New Orleans, La., April 9 (A.P.)—Searchers today continued searching for bodies of more than 35 sailors believed to have lost their lives in two Mississippi river disasters in the New Orleans district.

Several boats centred activities near Point a la Hache, about 40 miles below New Orleans, where the Dutch steamer Silvanus collided with the Standard Oil tanker Thomas H. Wheeler. Thirty members of the crew of the Silvanus were unaccounted for.

Boston Pastor Praises Hearst Editorial

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST'S advocacy, in an editorial in the Boston Evening American, of practical application of the principles of Christianity as a cure for the crime wave, was accorded warm praise by Rev. James T. Rider, Jr., associate pastor of Tremont Temple. He expressed himself as "delighted that a newspaper would give space to the emphasis of practical Christianity." The letter reads:

REV. JAMES T. RIDER, JR.

Editor Boston Evening American:

I was greatly interested in Mr. Hearst's editorial in today's American. I agree with the statement that we can "cure criminals only by a practical application of the principles of Christianity," but we must always remember that that involves the yielding of the entire life to the control of Jesus Christ, the Founder of Christianity. No one can expect to consistently follow the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount unless he has a regenerated heart. No one can have this new life without personal choice.

We all ought to have a great deal of sympathy for each other in view of the fact that we little know the weaknesses one may have by inheritance or the atmosphere one may have to live in constantly, but in spite of heredity or environment a man rises or falls by his own CHOICE.

I believe that eternal success or failure depends absolutely upon our attitude to Jesus Christ the Lord.

Mr. Hearst has turned our minds in the right direction, and I trust that more articles of this kind may be brought to the attention of the public. I am

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) JAS. T. RIDER.

moving picture, beautifully made. The world improves.

SHOOTING DOESN'T discourage Mussolini. With his nose plastered, his ears deafened with gunfire, shrieking sirens, cries of "Viva Mussolini" and "Viva Fascismo," Mussolini left yesterday for Tripoli, announcing his desire to convert the world to Fascism.

RUSSIANS WOULD convert the world to Communism. Mussolini and Trotsky are exact opposites, and each has the same plan to make the world accept his ideas.

OF THE TWO, Mussolini makes more progress. The human race understands powerful dictators. But a man that wants to "divide up" on a Communist basis seems a dangerous novelty.

FIVE MILLION radio sets in the United States have 27,000,000 human beings listening in. Said that so little broadcasting is worth attention. Science perfects the machinery, but intelligence hasn't yet supplied worthy material. But that will come. In future ages the individual worth while will have as personal following an audience of 100,000,000 or 500,000,000. The written word will no longer compete.

TWENTY-TWO MILLION DOLLARS' worth of oil burned in California, two men killed. Lightning caused two storage takes to explode. Those that spend money on lightning rods will wonder how valuable they really are. Cannot scientists find a way, with high tension wires or otherwise, to protect oil wells and oil storage? How long before great conductors escort the lightning safely down from the clouds and use it as it comes down? Edison should work at that.

RUSSIA "DESIRES to enlist private capital in State industries."

Russian credit should be better now than ever. The public debt has been eliminated quite simply. Wealth in Russia, if developed, would be as great as our own. But there is the big BUT. If a nation repudiates ONE set of debts, it might repudiate others.

CHICAGO WILL BUILD streets hollow at the centre, higher at the curb, concave, instead of convex. Moisture will run to the centre of the street, a more sanitary, less expensive plan.

Men learn slowly. Needles were used for 100,000 years before anybody thought of putting the eye in the point of the needle, thus making the sewing machine possible.

MRS. DRAKE, vice-president of the Child Study Association, says parental instinct is disappearing. There are no more "natural born parents." There are still, fortunately, plenty of natural born MOTHERS, millions of them.

It is not affection, but knowledge that mothers lack.

MEXICAN STATISTICS show that of 100 Mexican babies born, 48 live only a few months. Ignorance causes the deaths. Thanks largely to the pure milk campaign forced upon doctors and city government by Nathan Straus, this country takes better care of its babies. But thousands of mothers die in childbirth every year, unnecessary, brutal neglect the cause. We have no grounds for boasting.

WANTS CLEANER FRENCH RADIO BROADCASTING

Paris, April 9 (A.P.).—stricter censorship of broadcast programs is urged by Cardinal Dubois, archbishop of Paris. In a signed statement to the diocesan organ, Semaine Religieuse, the Cardinal writes "There are words spoken or sung which shock every upright conscience. They should be banished from the programs."

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Boston Society Taking Much Interest in Two New York Weddings

SMART OUT-OF-TOWN weddings with Boston young men figuring in the all-important bridegroom roles are taking out-of-town a smart contingent of masculinity enrolled as best men and ushers—together with a smaller but not less important feminine coterie as bride attendants.

YOUNG BOSTON men in attendance on James Jackson Lee when tomorrow he marries Miss Emily Dorothea Schniewind in Gotham's Fifth avenue Presbyterian Church are George C. Lee, Jr., Harrison Gardner, Chandler and Edward Bigelow, Arthur Hobson, Henry Sturgis Grew, Jr., Thomas Oakes and Vinton Chapin.

EIGHT EAST 79th street will be en fete for the large reception following the church ceremonial which is in its turn preluded by a jolly dinner dance in the Crystal Room of the Ritz—as handsomely appointed a ballroom as one could wish.

NEW YORK'S second wedding of April 10 with a Boston bridegroom is the ceremonial uniting Miss Dorothy Turner Meserve and Philip Bradish Kunhardt, in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church.

BERNARD COGAN, George E. Kunhardt, Jr., George Owen, Jr., Everett Morse and Justin Dempsey are in the Big City ready to wear the white boutonnieres badges of office as ushers at the church and to officiate similarly at the smart Colony Club, where the reception takes place.

THE GEORGE KUNHARDTS, parents of the bridegroom-elect, properly speaking, hail from the pretty little town of Andover, and Miss Hildegarde Kunhardt, a sister, is a bride attendant. Harvard is his alma mater and 1923 the year he took his sheepskin.

TO WASHINGTON goes a Proctor-Mandell-Rice coterie, wedding guests to attend Thomas Emerson Proctor, 2d, of Boston and the North Shore when he takes unto himself as wife Miss Margaret Olivia Flint, daughter of the Sherman Flints, Washingtonians of Sheridan Circle.

FROM EXQUISITE Bethlehem Chapel of the National Cathedral, nuptial scene of much beauty, guests go on to the Sheridan Circle home of the Flints to extend felicitations to the new Mrs. Proctor and her spouse.

FELICITATIONS ALSO will at that time shower on another member of the Proctor family, on the occasion of an engagement announcement. The lucky man hails from Geneseo, N. Y., the romance just now flowering having its beginnings in a mutual interest in sports.

(Photograph by Bachrach.)

MRS. FREDERICK WADSWORTH BUSK leads the cohorts putting on this evening's Chinese lantern festival and cabaret at the Copley-Plaza.

MISS POLLY PROCTOR (christened Mary but rescristened the diminutive by all her intimates) will pace the measured tread as bridesmaid in company with Miss Grace Vanderbilt, known to Bostonians as a recent guest in town of Mrs. Frederic Cameron Church, Jr.

OTHERWISE, the maids are from Washington and Gotham. Beverly Farms or thereabouts is to be the new home site of Mr. Proctor and his bride—in the hunt country where the Proctor, Rice and Mandell estates are widely flung and the three families lead a delightful country existence.

SIR CECIL and Lady Campbell's dinner at the Park Lane, honoring Miss Theodora Thorpe and William Palmer Dixon, was an ante-nuptial feast to the ceremonial itself, late this afternoon in St. James' Church, Madison avenue, Gotham.

THE Rev. Dr. William Greenough Thayer, of Southboro, reads the marriage lines, with the Rev. Dr. Crowder, Harvard, 1926, Tennis and Racquet Club, and Rockaway Hunt are a portion of the bridegroom's background.

HE IS A SON of the Hon. Mrs. Cecil Campbell, of London, and Miss Barbara Dixon, his sister, is a bridesmaid. John Ricketson, 2d, Boston and Pittsburgh; W. W. Lograham, Providence; S. Mauran Beale, Jr., Boston, and Ranlet Miner, Worcester, are ushers.

ALSO HOWES BURTON, JR., of New York, who in June marries the pretty little daughter of the William Endicott Dexters, Miss Sally Dexter. William P. Beal of Boston is best man.

LOCALLY, THE SPOTLIGHT has focus on Miss Helen Sargent and Walter K. Shaw's bridal, with Miss Grace Sargent the honor maid and Sullivan A. Sargent, Jr., L. Manlius Sargent, J. Malcolm Forbes and Charles K. Cummings, Jr., to seat the small guest company.

AND LOCALLY also the spotlight flashes, this evening, on a gorgeously colorful spectacle—the annual cabaret of the coterie which each year does a brilliant entertainment for the Infants' Hospital.

BRYAN GIRL'S EASTER HAT IS IN RING

Miami, Fla., April 9 (A.P.). — A daughter of William Jennings Bryan, who studied statecraft at the knee of her distinguished father, will raise the standard of Bryan in the national political arena again tonight. Speaking before the Miami Beach Chamber of Commerce, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen will launch her campaign for the fourth Florida district congressional seat.

One of the three children of the late Commoner, Mrs. Owen only recently became an American citizen for the second time. In her marriage to Major Reginald Owen, now a retired British army officer and veteran of Allenby's campaigns in Palestine, she renounced her American citizenship. Recently, however, she obtained her citizenship papers.

From early childhood, Mrs. Owen was a confidant of her father, and for a time acted as his aide.

WOMAN AUTOIST FOILS ATTEMPTED HOLDUP

Pawtucket, R. I., April 9.—Police are probing the story of Mrs. Joseph Monte, No. 112 West Broad street, who foiled attempts of an unknown thug to hold her up when she was returning alone in her coupe automobile from Stonington, Conn.

Not allowing Mrs. Monte's car to pass his on the state highway that leads into this town on the border line, the assailant suddenly raced his car a 100 yards ahead, jumped from it and levelled a revolver at the woman operator as her car rolled by. His demands to stop were answered with quicker gas acceleration. Mrs. Monte steering her machine in the direction of the bandit, knocking him against his own parked sedan.

NILE MUSEUM TO 'UNFOLD' HUMAN LIFE

Will Be Built on Island Near Cairo as Planned by Rockefeller

New York, April 9 (A.P.)—The proposed Egyptian museum, for which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has offered the Egyptian government $10,000,000, would become a "temple of the unfolding life of man," according to Dr. James Henry Breasted, Mr. Rockefeller's representative.

Tentative plans call for a new museum building on an island in the Nile facing Cairo and an adjoining institute of archaeological research, which together will cost $5,400,000. The remainder of the gift would be used as an endowment.

Because there are no native Egyptian students of Egyptology, the plans provide for control of the museum for 20 years by a commission of two representatives each of the United States, England and France. At the end of this period it will be turned over to the Egyptian government.

A committee of three Americans, including Dr. Breasted, would have charge of construction, but from the beginning the historical property would be owned by Egypt.

SENATE'S VOTE ON BROOKHART TO BE CLOSE

Frank W. Stearns Watches Battle From Coolidge Gallery

Washington, April 9 (A.P.)—The vigorous fight over the Iowa senatorial contest threatened today to keep the Senate engaged well into next week.

With the debate in its fifth day and indications of a close decision multiplying, the hope of Senate leaders for a vote before the end of the week have considerably dimmed.

POLLS RAISE DOUBT.

Polls by various members have given no clear indication of the outcome. In one, a majority of five was credited to Senator Brookhart, the insurgent Republican whose right to the seat he now holds is at issue, and in another, a majority of two was indicated for Daniel F. Steck, his Democratic opponent in the last election.

Brookhart supporters, meanwhile, have openly expressed concern over rumors that White House influence was being exerted against him, but Senator Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee, and Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican floor leader, have denied that President Coolidge has expressed any wish as to the outcome.

STEARNS ATTENDS.

Frank W. Stearns of Boston, personal friend of Mr. Coolidge, listened to most of yesterday's discussion from the President's row in the gallery, but neither Senator Cummins, Republican, Iowa, nor Senator Brookhart has attended any of the sessions, while Steck, although in Washington with the chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Iowa, has not been seen at the capitol.

Accident Victim Dies

Pittsfield, April 9.—Conrad Yackles of East Nassau, N. Y., who was brought here after being found beside the tracks of the Lebanan & Rutland Railroad, died at the hospital from fracture of the skull.

PHONE-OUT-OF-ORDER RUSE NETS THIEF $100

Saco, Me., April 9.—Answering a query as to the price of corn one day Harper grain store $100 and impressed Hartley Whitten with the fact that business courtesy may be costly on occasions.

He was sitting in the office when a young man came in and inquired the price of the cereal which was formerly used for the making of the old bourbon, and which is now dedicated to a more ignoble use.

After receiving a reply the young man left the store. A few moments lapsed when an employee of the Community Press, next door, asked Mr. Whitten to step to their phone, as there was a call for him, and the Harper grain store instrument was reported "out of order."

He responded and there found a man calling for the price of corn at the other end of the line. When he concluded the conversation and returned to the grain store he found that a thief had abstracted $100 from the firm's cash drawer.

ALL STREET BEGGING BANNED IN JERUSALEM

Jerusalem, April 9 (A.P.).—Begging, one of the most prevalent Eastern "plagues," henceforth will be prohibited in Jerusalem. An order just issued prohibits all street soliciting and "touting," particular stress being laid on the annoyance of tourists. Guides and shopkeepers are warned that in future such solicitation will be an offence punishable by law.

Begging includes "insisting upon 'bakshesh' (alms) for unsolicited services."

REWARD OF $1,000 FOR LOST NEWARK JEWELER

Relatives of Malcolm G. Fleming, president of Fleming & Company, Newark, N. J., jewelers, who disappeared in Boston March 19, have offered a $1,000 reward for information which will lead to his discovery, alive or dead.

On March 19, Fleming, appearing cheerful, entered a Washington street store and asked permission to leave a sample case, saying he would be back in an hour, "maybe sooner." He has not been seen since.

LABOR DARES DRYS TO LET PUBLIC VOTE ON BEER

ter off with wine and beer than with poison grog."

William Roberts, speaking as the personal representative of President William Green of the Federation, said the pendulum of public opinion surely was swinging away from the lone dry policies inaugurated during the war.

The drys, he said, were fighting a referendum because they were afraid of the result.

Ninety-five per cent. of the working people in New Jersey favor modification of the Volstead act, the committee was told by Henry S. Hilfers, secretary of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor, the Lars witness of the day.

GET US ANYWHERE.

"The Volstead act has been the direct cause of more crime in New Jersey than any other thing," Hilfers said. "Before we had prohibition they say, we had a saloon on every corner; now we have a still or brewery in every home. They even have community stills. The People in a hotel will chip in and make a mess on synthetic gin and then distribute it pro-rata.

"Some may ask where they get it. Ask me where they can't get it and I'll have an easier question to answer.

"I think the committee will take judicial notice that New Jersey is wet," observed Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana.

"I think it has been demonstrated," said Hilfers.

William Roberts told the committee that the "present uprising of those opposed to the Volstead act is a notable, mild movement."

"I sincerely believe that those who oppose light wines and beers realize that a referendum would declare in favor of a modification of the Volstead act," he said. "If this were not true, why do they fight a referendum so strenuously?

FIND LIQUOR EVERYWHERE.

"The defenders of the Volstead act apparently prefer to see the people of our country seriously affected by vicious concoctions of liquor rather than to make it a temperance country by legalizing the manufacture of mild beers."

Mr. Roberts was the first witness for the vets at the fifth day of the Senate hearings. The drys will begin the presentation of their side of the prohibition picture next week.

Telling of the 33,000-mile trip that he and Sols Samuel Gompers made over the country in 1923 and 1924, the witness said that "everywhere we went there was plenty of distilled liquor, but seldom real beer."

"We found that the homes of the people had been turned into breweries and distilleries which turned out dangerous decoctions that if drunk to any extent would ruin the health of those who drank them," he continued.

WHOLE NATION AROUSED.

"When asked why they drank such stuff, they said there was nothing else to be obtained, and they invariably asked when were members of Congress going to realize that the manufacture and sale of beer would make for true temperance. We found as well as men were interested in such questioning.

"As time passed the resentment appeared to grow in intensity as we traveled about the country from coast to coast and from Canada to the Mexican border. The greatest complaint appeared to be that the people were forced to drink all kinds of concoctions represented to be whiskey.

"But the resentment did not find much publicity as newspapers generally supported the Volstead Act because the dry element spread its propaganda unceasingly in every part of the land.

"The opponents of the act, so far as it prohibited the manufacture of beer and light wine, were only restricted in the choice of opposition among their friends and acquaintances."

Calling attention that after Governor Smith had signed the bill repealing the State enforcement act he was re-elected by a substantial majority Mr. Roberts said:

"That is an evident indication of the feeling among the people of the United States, and the recent straw vote taken by the newspapers simply emphasizes what occurred in New York State. Give the people a chance to vote on the issue and there is no doubt of the result.

"The wage-earner as well as the people generally cannot understand how a man can be 'personally wet' and 'politically dry.' The straw vote will awaken men to the fact that they have been misinformed as to the real situation, and that it is not necessary for them to straddle the fence. It may give them courage to vote their real convictions.

NOT TRUE INTERPRETATION

"No doubt this issue will be raised in many congressional districts, the outcome of which will give a better idea of the sentiment in favor of a modification of the Volstead act, as the wage earners do not believe it is a true interpretation of the eighteenth amendment.

"Any law that takes away a right is highly objectionable to the American people and fanatical statements so frequently heard and printed increase the resentment against the Volstead act and even the eighteenth amendment itself."

Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, asked the witness whether the consumption of hard liquor and distilling in the homes would decrease if beer were put on sale.

ALL LABOR FOR BEER.

"I haven't the least doubt of it," replied Roberts.

"Does the American Federation of Labor oppose the Eighteenth Amendment?" asked Senator Harreld, Republican, Oklahoma.

"No, it is urging 4.76 beer."

"Can you give us the number of State federations that have asked for beer?" put in Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana.

"All of them coincide in the action of the executive council," Roberts said. "Some of them have proposed limits."

William J. MacSorley, president of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, urged amendment of the Volstead act as a matter of justice.

The rich can get liquor, McSorley said, but the workingmen cannot get the beer they want.

HELD UP BY BOOTLEGS.

"The great majority of the building trade men believe in modification, especially when we see how the law is working out," he continued. "Justices of the peace are called in by district attorneys and forced to resign."

"What for?" asked Senator Reed.

"For co-operating with enforcement officers in 'shaking down' bootleggers. Why, in Cuyahoga County, O., the district attorney has compelled several justices to resign."

Replying to Senator Reed, McSorley said that if the workmen wanted to drink now he had to pay a bootlegger $10 for a quart of whiskey.

"If he could get beer he would not do that," the witness said. "Those who can't buy whiskey make home brew, which in the end is nothing but a lot of sour slop."

"Can they get drunk on it?" asked Reed.

"Oh, I suppose so. Each man has his own formula. I know of numerous cases of men who never drank whiskey who drink it now."

"A man gets a bottle of whiskey; gets a few friends and then don't stop until it is all gone," he added.

Next the vets called Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Longshoremen's union, who said the reformers" had started early to work on the seamen by cutting off their grog at sea.

GROG THEORY FAILS.

"The theory was," he said, "that if the men did not get their grog at sea they would lose their taste for it. The theory did not work out.

"As a seaman, I am opposed to the saloon; always was and always will be. The real men among the seamen take the same position.

"We seamen, you know, are the rakings and scrapings of hell and bedlam. Some do down and some come back. We represent every strata of society."

The veteran labor leader went on to say that a month after enactment of the Volstead Act he found in Portland, Ore., a condition which made him an ardent supporter of the act. Seamen were sober and independent.

DRY LAW EVILS.

"Two years later," he continued, "I returned to the same port and found conditions worse than in pre-prohibition days. The bootleggers then were organized, and the seamen could get liquor, it seemed, when no one else could. It was terrible stuff they drank.

"If seamen could go into a restaurant, properly conducted, and get a glass of beer or a glass of claret, not 10 per cent. of them would seek hard liquor. That's the way it was worked in other countries, England, Canada and Italy.

"Men who work in hot places, like marine firemen, can't drink water. It makes them sick. They must have beer or else oatmeal in their water."

WAS A PROHIBITIONIST.

Furuseth then gave the committee a chapter out of his own life to illustrate his point that there is "no sense" in the present situation.

"I have been a prohibitionist," he said, "but after I became sixty years old I took some claret. They took it away from me.

"Since prohibition I use some whiskey, a tablespoonful in a glass of water, and then eat my dinner. The doctor says it does me good."

"Did you pay $6 a pint for it?" asked Senator Reed.

"No, I paid two dollars and six bits; the doctor didn't charge me for the prescription.

"Sometimes I got some stuff given me that didn't smell right or taste right, so I threw it in the swill."

LABOR NOT FOR SALOON.

"Do you have any difficulty finding someone to sell that sort of stuff to you?" asked Senator Reed.

"No, I never did."

James O'Connell, president of the Metal Trade Workers' Association, told the committee there seemed to be an effort to make it appear that organized labor favored the return of the saloon.

"No class in society would be more strongly opposed to the return of the saloon than organized labor," he declared. "It is not a question with me whether we should have 2.75 beer or 5 or 5 per cent. wine. The question is whether the present law is operative.

"My observation is that it is not. Far from it.

"This law is being violated openly and flauntingly by every class of society. It is violated more freely by some classes because they have the money.

VIOLATED EVERYWHERE.

"Everywhere I go, and I am traveling one-third of my time, prohibition is the one subject of conversation, on the trains; in the hotels; in the home.

CHARITY DANCE BY LEGION

Following a program of holding a dance each year for the benefit of one of the public welfare institutions in Hingham, the Edward Ball Cole Post, American Legion, will devote the proceeds of this year's dance to the Hingham Memorial Hospital fund. The dance will be held Wednesday evening, April 14, at Agricultural Hall, Hingham Centre.

The committee in charge of the affair has spared no expense to make the dance a success. One of the best known Boston dance bands, the Fenway Ballroom Orchestra, which is led by Leo Willworth, has been procured for the occasion.

Franklin P. Harnes, who for the past generation has been known along the South Shore as the master of ceremonies at old-time dances, will be in charge of announcing the square sets and reels.

BOARDER IN BED WITH COUPLE NO CRIME

Approved by Court in Back Bay Apartment Economics Plan

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sheldon, and their youthful boarder, Earl F. Baker, may sleep three-a-bed tonight at the Sheldon Peterborough street apartment, and the Back Bay vice squad will be forced to gnash their teeth outside.

For the court said that there was nothing wrong with the arrangement as long as the Sheldons and their boarder are content with the economic scheme of things.

When Baker was arraigned in Municipal Court on a serious charge he amazed the prosecution by admitting that he had slept in the same bed with Mrs. Sheldon. Then he added that Mr. Sheldon also slept in the same bed.

The husband, called to the stand, admitted the arrangement, adding that his wife had slept on one side, he in the middle, and the boarder on the other side. There was but one bed in the apartment, he explained.

After Mrs. Sheldon and Baker were acquitted, the husband and Baker left court chatting cheerfully together.

Police told of visiting the apartment at six in the morning on an occasion when it seemed that Sheldon had been compelled to work all night. Baker, according to the police, clad in his union suit, opened the door for them, and admitted that he had been sleeping with Mrs. Sheldon.

The woman, they said, admitted the same thing, and expressed surprise that her husband, too, wasn't in bed.

CONFERENCE CALLED ON OIL POLLUTION

Washington, April 9 (A.P.).—A conference of maritime nations has been called by the United States to meet in Washington June 3 for the purpose of "dealing with the problem of oil pollution through international agreement." Invitations have been sent to Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Spain and Sweden. Conclusions of a committee made public by Secretary Kellogg point out that oil pollution exists in a more or less aggravated form along the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts and along the coasts of the principal maritime nations.

WOODEN LEG TAKEN OFF PRISONER AT NIGHT

Kosmoskie is in the death house for the murder of Miss Mildred Durkee in Erie county.

BRENNAN SURE TOGA IS HIS ON WET PLANK

Democratic "Boss" Tells the Leaders in Congress Prohibition Is Big 1928 Issue

(Copyright, 1926, by International News Service.)

Washington, April 9.—George E. Brennan, the rotund Democratic "boss" of Chicago, who has had a hand in the making and breaking of many political candidates and who is himself a candidate for the Senate, gave Democratic leaders in Congress something of a shock today.

He told them he was going to be elected in November on a wet platform. And he was sincere.

Brennan also told Democratic leaders that the prohibition issue is in politics to stay, and that they might as well prepare to meet it in 1928.

"I don't see how it can be kept out of politics," he said. "Anything that affects the thoughts and the daily lives of millions of people, that is creating the disrespect for law that this law is, that is breeding the army of criminals that this law is, that is the major topic of conversation wherever and whenever people gather, irrespective of their social status, is bound to be in politics. There's no use shutting our eyes to facts."

W. C. T. U. HEAD DENIES SAYING CODMAN TRAITOR

Saying that she has never called any man "a black traitor," Mrs. Ella A. Gleason of Winchester, honorary president of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., issued a statement refuting a recent story in which she was quoted as referring to Julian Codman, representing the "wets" at the Congressional hearings on the prohibition situation at Washington, as a "black traitor."

"I said, 'We used to call a man who worked against the Constitution of his own country in the interest of a foreign power, which is the International Society for the Liberty to make Alcohol in Every Country—we used to call such a man a traitor.'"

FLIER WILKINS' ARCTIC AIDS NEAR DEATH

Aged Jap Starves on the Trail When Sent Back by Smith's Party

Wiseman, Alaska, April 9 (A.P.)—A tale of hardships experienced by Alexander Malcolm Smith and his party who are struggling northward across virtually unexplored wastes of Northern Alaska with supplies for the Point Barrow base of the Arctic 'air expedition of Captain George H. Wilkins was told here today.

James Minano, a seventy-year-old Japanese, who has lived north of the Arctic circle nearly all his life, traveled with the party from Bettles for 200 miles northward along the John River and returned to Bettles after Smith turned Minano and a number of natives loose when food ran short.

57 BELOW ZERO.

He said the party encountered numerous snow storms and the temperature averaged zero. All were wet during the days and enjoyed little or no comfort at night. Fifteen miles a day was averaged along the John River, which runs northwest into the Anaktuvuk, a large tributary of the Colville River.

The weather improved after the party crossed the summit of the Brooks Mountains, but the temperature ropped and averaged 15 degrees below zero, with strong easterly winds. The lowest temperature recorded was 37 below zero.

Wild game was expected for dog food, but none was seen nor even snowshoe rabbits which are usually common in the Arctic.

HAD TO KILL DOG

No one rode a step as the rapidly sinking energy of the dogs was needed. Smith lost two dogs from his team after reaching the summit. One of the animals dropped on the trail from starvation and Smith pronounced it dead. Later the dog which had come to life and seeming returned to the haunts and habits of his ancestors, the wolf, appeared and attacked a team which was bringing up the rear of the division of dog teams. A driver shot the animal.

Minano declared there was no fire on the trip except in the cook's tent where corn bread and coffee were made.

QUEEN SEWS AS DUCHESS AWAITS VISIT OF STORK

London, April 9 (A.P.).—Queen Mary personally has made several perambulator or cot covers for the Duchess of York, who is expecting an interesting event some time this Spring. The Queen, who sews beautifully and is very fond of doing hand work during odd moments, has worked three pink and three blue coverlets, crocheted in a scallop pattern and lined with crepe de chine of exactly the same shade. The crocheting is described as exquisitely smooth.

WHO SLEW THIS BIRD? ZOO HAS MYSTERY!

"Yum," fighting ostrich of Franklin Park Zoo, found slain today. It is believed the bird was chloroformed. Police are investigating the "crime." "Yum" had a bad reputation and was kept in a pen of his own.

ARSENIC IN TEA POISONS 27 MOSCOW WORKERS

Moscow, April 9 (A.P.).—Twenty-seven workmen were poisoned by drinking tea from a galvanized tank is suspected, which, investigation showed, contained arsenic. Seven are dying and the rest are seriously ill. A special commission is investigating A plot to poison the entire staff of the factory where the men were employed

WILD OSTRICH FOUND DEAD AT FRANKLIN PARK

Untamable Bird Drugged to Death by a Daring Killer, Who Invades His Pen

"Yum," the untamable male ostrich of the Franklin Park Zoo, is dead.

He was not seriously killed today by an unknown man who left his hat and overcoat behind in his flight from the enclosure where the bird was confined.

Ornithological experts have not yet been able to determine how he laid the proud bird low, but chloroform is suspected.

That the assassin was brave, as well as malicious, is testified to by attendants at the zoo who for weeks have been battered and kicked around by "Yum," whom they had to place in an unused section of the camel pen for safe keeping. "Yum" wouldn't gitly his fellow-captives any rest either.

When an assistant went to inspect him from afar today he discovered the feathered remains, and nearby a man's dark gray overcoat. Somehow the marauder had climbed a seven-foot fence, committed his crime and escaped.

The overcoat was turned over to the police. It bears a manufacturer's label, "Hagedorn," and has black, green and white striped lining, and in one of the pockets were a dollar bill, two keys and some Christmas cards.

Experts will make a post mortem examination and then "Yum" may be stuffed as a prize exhibit although dead, of the desert flock.

LOS ANGELES TO MAKE FLIGHT ON MONDAY

Washington, April 9 (I.N.S.).—The dirigible Los Angeles on Monday will make its first flight since its sister ship, the Shenandoah, crashed over Ohio last Fall, the Navy Department announced today. The flight had been scheduled for tomorrow, but was postponed because the Los Angeles has not been filled with helium. Gas was being pumped into the huge hull, and the ship will be taken out at Lakehurst on Monday.

DURAND SUCCEEDS MALVY IN BRIAND MINISTRY

Paris, April 9 (A.P.).—Louis Malvy's resignation as Minister of the Interior was accepted by the Cabinet today. Jean Durand was appointed to succeed him. Durand's successor in the Ministry of Agriculture will be chosen tomorrow. No secret is made among the members of the Left bloc of the fact that Malvy is leaving the Cabinet at the behest of many of his radical friends, who are opposed to Premier Briand and desire to bring about the return of the Herriot ministry.

U. S. Papers Are Free, Says Coolidge

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE spoke in glowing terms of the newspapers of the United States at the laying of the corner-stone of the national press club at Washington. Following are striking excerpts from his address:

The public press of this country is absolutely independent.

In general it is remarkably clean and wholesome.

It is my firm conviction that the press of this country is strong enough . . . to create a noble and inspired public opinion.

The press of our country is free because the Constitution guarantees its freedom.

In the field of foreign relations the attitude of the press becomes of very great importance. What the people of our country as a whole know of contemporary actions of other countries is gained entirely from the public prints.

NEW AGREEMENT FAVORS NICKEL PLATE MERGER

New York, April 9 (A.P.)—Minority stockholders in the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad and the Van Sweringen interests have ended their long standing controversy. Two members of the minority stockholders' committee, George Cole Scott and J. S. Bryan, are to be admitted to the directorate of the Chesapeake & Ohio. Railroad men consider this the fourth step of the Van Sweringens in preparation for a new Nickel Plate merger plan. The others were the abolishing of the interlocking directorates, objected to by the Interstate commerce commission; the offer to permit stockholders deposit ing under the original agreement to withdraw; and the extension of bank loans.

Revealing the Appealing Private Documents of the World's Greatest Woman Ruler

A Paper That Goes Into the Home, Dependable, Fearless, Entertaining and Instructive

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

BOSTON, FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1926

SECOND SECTION

FIRE FORCES 19-STORY DEATH DROP

William Ewart Gladstone gladdened the Queen's heart by expressing his desire for ample monetary provision for the royal family. Gladstone was then head of the British Treasury

Queen Victoria was greatly heartened by assurances of Gladstone, Chancellor of the Exchequer, that her private finances and those of the royal family would be taken care of, and she then went ahead with plans for the wedding of her 18-year-old daughter, Princess Alice, to Prince Louis of Hesse.

This is revealed in today's installment printed by the Boston Evening American of selections from "The Letters of Queen Victoria, 1862-1878," comprising some of the most remarkable documents of history.

These selections, including extracts from Queen Victoria's diary, are published with the full approval and permission of her grandson, His Majesty King George.

Queen Prepared for Death

The Queen has been and is still occupied in writing and leaving directions of every kind and sort, in case of her death; for now she has no longer him, to whom she would have confided all, and who would have known what ought to have been done with everything, she felt anxious that everything should be wisely and safely arranged. This she hopes she has effectually done

The Queen, having said this much about herself, wishes to say that she trusts that Lord Russell has taken care that, in case of anything happening to him, all his papers are safe, and here and the Prince's letters to him should be returned to her.

Feeling ill and weakly and longing, as the poor wretched Queen does, to join her dearly beloved and adored husband, her mind is naturally much occupied with leaving this world, and therefore with the importance of having everything in order.

Extract From the Queen's Journal

WINDSOR CASTLE, 14th June 1862.—Heard of Bertie's landing (the Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward VII., on his return from his visit to the Near East), after a boisterous crossing. Bertie arrived at half past five, looking extremely well. I was much upset at seeing him, and feeling his beloved father was not there to welcome him back. He would have been so pleased to see him so improved, and looking so bright and healthy. Dear Bertie was most affectionate, and the tears came into his eyes when he saw me.

(In the midst of her own bereavement, Queen Victoria found time to write the following letter of consolation over the sudden

HOTEL GUEST'S GRIP FAILS; RESCUE NEAR

Chicago, April 9 (A.P.).—Two men, aided by a woman, risked their lives here early today in a daring but unsuccessful attempt to rescue Leo J. Ainsworth of Cincinnati, while he clung from a window ledge of his fire-swept hotelroom 300 feet above the sidewalk.

The men formed a human ladder from a window below the hanging man, but before a rescue could be effected Ainsworth dropped from the nineteenth floor, his burned fingers no longer able to hold his weight.

He was instantly killed 8 stories of loop pedestrians gazed in horror on the scene, powerless to aid.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Melville, of Chicago, and F. A. Goldstone of New York, guests at the Morrison Hotel where the tragedy occurred, were the three who sought to save Ainsworth, a pioneer in radio manufacturing and broadcasting in Cincinnati.

Others who broke down the door to Ainsworth's room had to battle the flames and when they reached the ledge they were too late.

"Tell my wife," beran Ainsworth just before he dropped, but the rest of the words were not heard by the rescuers on the ledge below him.

It is supposed Ainsworth fell asleep on his bed when smoking, and awakened to find his room in flames.

A guest in an adjoining room heard him cry for some one to break down the door and then heard the window opened.

Ainsworth came to the ledge for five minutes. The impact of the body was so terrific that many persons who heard it thought an explosion had occurred.

His widow and two children live in Cleveland. It was in Cincinnati that Ainsworth became a leader in the radio field. With Howard Gates he founded station WHAS and last year. He was president of the Ainsworth Radio Company of Cincinnati

FIDDLES HIS WAY INTO GRAND 'PLAY DOWN'

James Claffey, 65, of No. 36 St. Botolph street, Boston, who fiddled way into final round of international fiddling contest at Lewiston, Me. Several pictures will be awarded to victor in tomorrow's grand "fiddle down."

HUB MAN TO COMPETE IN 'FIDDLE DOWN'

Lewiston, April 9—Tomorrow night comes the great "fiddle-down" of old timers of the bow, the big finale to the week of fiddling here, and there will be at least one Boston man in a number of the elect who will do their stuff.

He is James Claffey, 65 years old of No. 36 St. Botolph street, who came through with all honors on North Night.

Claffey, who is a native of the Maritime Provinces, won a place in the "golden death period" over a field of the best of Boston, Providence and Lewiston fiddlers, by playing "Arkansas Traveler" and "Money Musk" in a way of his own composition.

James T. Claffey of Providence won the only two-fold player of the evening. He kept time with both feet, scraping off the reels and jigs until a shower of rosin from his bow

BRITISH STEAMSHIP HAS LONG VOYAGE

After a long and stormy passage from Port Talbot, Wales, which lasted her at sea nearly a month, the British steamship Emperor of Halifax Captain W. S. Russell, has arrived off the New England coast, great quantities of fold in were eighteen together with many enough to make the going rough for Claffey.

Of contrast was Chester Searing, 60, the sage of Jonas, grand veteran of West Port, Me. in Earnest shirt and woolen pants. He entered in a suit of his own composition.

James T. Claffey of Providence won the only two-fold player of the evening. He kept time with both feet, scraping off the reels and jigs until a shower of rosin from his bow

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

Many radio users ground their sets on a hot steam pipe and then when the heat is turned off the pipe contracts and causes the ground clamp to loosen. You get no distance with a loose ground connection.

HOW TO TUNE YOUR SET

This is a popular type of superheterodyne receiver. The dial on the left tunes the incoming wave through the medium of the loop antenna. This tunes much broader than the right hand dial, and the wave usually comes in on only one setting.

The right hand dial, however, tunes the local oscillator circuit, and this is the one which confuses most of the fans. This dial has to tune to a wave either slightly higher or lower than that of the incoming wave. This means that a station may come in on 10 and then again on 20. In the space between we hear nothing excepting perhaps the wave of some other stations which are rather close to the one we are tuning in on.

Many fans ask, "But if a superheterodyne is so sharply tuned, why is it that I get local stations on five or six settings?" The answer is simple. The reason local signals are picked up at different parts of the right hand dial scale is because their volume is so great as to be picked up by harmonics of the local oscillator. Take WNAC for example. We get him say on 10 and 20. Then we find a couple of places up around 360 meters where he comes in again. This second point is on the second harmonic of the oscillator, or approximately twice WNAC's wave length.

The volume of the "superhet" is controlled in various ways. In the home made set we use a potentiometer, which has the appearance of an ordinary filament rheostat on the panel. The commercial sets use no potentiometer, but have the radio frequency amplification fixed in value. The volume is controlled by a separate rheostat in the second detector circuit.

An antenna is unnecessary with this "superhet," although some prefer to use one. When such is done, care should be taken with home made sets that they do not radiate and "squawk" for the neighbors. This may be eliminated by using a "muffler" tube, or stage of radio frequency between the antenna and the set itself.

For the Notebook

It is not necessary to ground metal antenna poles.

The size and weight of a storage battery are no indication of its electrical efficiency.

By merely switching the tubes around in different sockets the efficiency of a set might be increased from 50 to 75 per cent.

Aerial Repairs

A thorough inspection of the aerial should be made with the advent of Spring days. Wire which is exposed to the elements for any length of time is likely to sag and, unless the connections have been carefully made and soldered, there is also a chance of corrosion. All parts of the aerial should be examined, broken insulators replaced, and dirty ones cleaned. Especially examine the joint between the lead-in wire and the aerial unless the lead-in is continuous with the aerial and no joint is used, making sure that the two wires are tightly soldered together. See that there are no breaks in the lead in or aerial wires, and that the lead in insulator is in good condition.

Reasonable Prices

The first requirement in food is to have it good—in taste, in quality, in wholesomeness.

But, equal with flavor is food value. It isn't mere bulk that determines nourishment; it is the proper selection of materials, their purity, and the way they are prepared.

That is why in making tomato ketchup Heinz first develops the seed and supervises the growing of the tomatoes. Then, in the cooking, Heinz boils out the surplus water so that the full essence of the tomato is left—which means you get all the tomato goodness and utmost food value for your money.

EHMKE FACES GENEWICH AS CITY SERIES OPENS

SUN GREETS FANS AT FENWAY

Enthusiastic Throng Gathers at Park to Witness the Teams in Action

lit, because of the natural rivalry and because the athletes felt that they needed the workout. The second game of the series will be played tomorrow, also at the Fenway, as the Wigwam is not ready for baseball.

The postponement of the opener changed managerial plans considerably.

Manager Bancy intended to use Joe Genewich for six or seven innings had a Thursday game been played. That would have fixed Joe properly for the Tuesday opening in Philadelphia. As things stand now Joseph will merely toss three innings, Larry Benton will do the same, and Johnny Cooney will wind up.

Howard Ehmke will take a short whirl for the Sox to be followed by Zahniser and somebody else, unless the game is too tight. It doesn't pay to work good pitchers too much just before important assignments are coming up.

Manager Bancroft of the Braves has had his bruised leg rubbed into form again, but has collected a cold in the back, and will not get into today's conflict unless the sun shines warmly and brightly.

Owner Bob Quinn of the Sox has been swamped by congratulatory calls and letters for getting Rigney from the Tigers. The expression of approbation has made Bob appreciate just how much the native populace is aching to have real baseball brought back here where it belongs.

Rigney will join the club early next week and work himself into the game before the club goes on the road. Meantime Dudley Lewis will have his final chance of answering himself to a big league job. Dudley hasn't been much of a success for a couple of seasons, but a lot of good baseball men insist that he has it in him.

Mondt Winner Over Stasiak

Ilmia Mondt scored a victory over Stanley Stasiak in two out of three falls in the feature match of the wrestling bill at the Grand Opera House.

Stasiak took the first fall in 39 minutes and 30 seconds with a side crotch and body lift. Mondt took the second fall with head and hip lock in 18 minutes and 30 seconds, and the third fall in 4 minutes with an arm lock.

Raffael Glenna won from Ned McGuire in a handicap match which lasted 30 minutes. McGuire agreed to loose the decision if he could throw the Italian strong man.

Big Bill Heth, northwestern heavyweight champion, defeated Chief Montour, Indian wrestler, in 14 minutes.

Harris Stands Pat on Lineup of Washington

Atlanta, Ga., April 9 (A.P.).—In spite of references of baseball critics to the Washington Senators as "cripples" and "old men," Bucky Harris, youthful player-manager, said here today that "it is the same outfit that won the world's championship year before last and the American League pennant last year.

"If history repeats itself, we will land on top this year," Harris said. "My team is not composed of old men. It is all made up of some of the best ball players ever produced. Just because a man has had experience, doesn't mean that he can't play baseball."

Harris said he would start the season with the same team that appeared last year in the World Series.

TRIS SPEAKER UNDECIDED ON GARDEN

Manager Tris Speaker will use Homer Summa or Cliff Lee in the right field pasture when they open the season with Detroit.

Fred Lindstrom will start at third for the Giants in the first game, according to an announcement made by Boss McGraw.

Unsettled weather at Nashville yesterday resulted in Detroit Tigers missing their first day's work since the Spring training season opened.

The Philadelphia Athletics and the Phillies will meet twice before the season offers a curtain raiser.

The St. Louis Cardinals, idle today, closed their training tour yesterday with a victory at Mobile. Hornsby's tribe faces the Browns at St. Louis tomorrow.

With Lamotte, McManus and Davis hitting well, the Browns are carded to oppose Memphis today.

The Pittsburgh Pirates have released Pitcher Louis Koupal to the Buffalo Internationals under option.

The Yanks and Dodgers reached town today. The Yanks have won nine games and lost none, topping this excellent record with a 14 to 4 victory yesterday at Charlotte, Ruth Ledell and Koenig hitting homers.

Two down and three to go, the New York Giants were faced with the task of taking the three remaining games from the Washington Senators in order to win the series.

SOX ACE ON MOUND

HOWARD EHMKE

HEAVY HITTERS FEATURE FIRST ARENA SHOW

Thirty-eight rounds of rough, tough and active fighting will feature the opening boxing card of the Boston Arena Club at the Arena next Tuesday night. In arranging his bill, Matchmaker George Freeman has leaned to heavy weights. The main bout featuring Tom Kirby of Roxbury and Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia, should furnish some of the best boxing seen in this city in months.

A victory over Loughran would place Kirby in the front rank of light heavyweights. Anyone who has ever seen Kirby box will concede that he ranks with the most skilful men in his class.

While brilliant boxing will mark the feature bout next Tuesday night, the preliminary bill will provide the heavy hitting of the night. Matchmaker Freeman has used excellent judgment in the pairing of men. The semi-final of eight rounds sends the hard hitting Art Weigand of Buffalo against the 69 inch heavy walloping Battling Kid Thomas of this city.

Sectional rivalry and a personal feud adds attractiveness to the eight round bout between Jimmy Mosher and Rocky Rowe both of Roxbury.

From out of Syracuse comes champagne Bob to figure in another eight round affair with an opponent yet to be selected. Champagne Bob looks a terrific wallop and the Kid from Dixie is having a difficult time to find a man willing to step in against the New York boy.

A four round bout featuring local boys will close the Arena Club's opening show.

CARPENTIER TO WORK OUT WITH HASSAN

New York, April 9 (I. N. S.).—Max Rosenbloom signed to meet Eddie Huffman, California light heavyweight, in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden on May 21. Georges Carpentier planned to work out this afternoon at a local gymnasium with Hagen Hassan, Turkish heavyweight. The Frenchman declared that he was going on Huffman only with the idea of getting in a match with Paul Berlenbach, the light heavyweight champion.

MARCOT-PUTZOIS LEAD IN SIX-DAY BIKE RACE

Paris, April 9 (A.P.).—Early this morning in the six-day grind in the Velodrome, Marcot and Putzois were in first place, Wambst and Lacquehay, second, and De Wolf and Stockbroch, third.

The American team of McNamara and Horan were in fourteenth position.

Cugnot and Baron, who had been placed by the referees in seventh position, abandoned the race at 8:25 o'clock this morning. Previously, after the early morning sprints, Giorgetti and Faudet retired.

McCARRON AND COLLINS GOING TO SO. AMERICA

Jack McCarron of Somerville and Francis Collins of Salem have been selected by the boxing committee of the A. A. U. to represent the United States in the Pan-American international tournament at Buenos Aires next month. Both boys have accepted the invitation and will leave tomorrow with the other members of the team from New York.

RICKARD WANTS KANSAS TO MEET SOLLY SEEMAN

New York, April 9 (I. N. S.).—Tex Rickard declared today that he would make an offer to Rocky Kansas lightweight champion to defend his title against Solly Seeman, of New York, during the Summer months either at the Yankee Stadium or Madison Square Garden. The offer will be held in pending Seeman's showing against Ray Bussey in Buffalo on Monday.

Boxing Notes

Tacoma, Wash.—Ray Cliffe, Seattle, beat Leo Ballinger, Chicago, six rounds. Big Bill McKenzie, Canada, knocked out Kid Dowd's Moose Jaw Canada six round.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, shaded Abe Goldstein, New York ten rounds.

At Yonkers, N. Y.—Joe Malone knocked out Billy Marlow in the first round of a scheduled six-round bout. Both men are bantamweights.

At Philadelphia—Mickey Pagnar, Philadelphia scored a technical knockout over Angel Goldict Philadelphia in the fifth round of a ten-round scheduled bout.

At McKeesport, Pa.—Johnny Mann, Braddock, and Andy Tarasky, Wilmerding drew ten rounds. George Meeanles, Pittsburgh, defeated Johnny Gerald, Braddock, ten rounds; Johnny Dunn, New Kensington, defeated Frank Sabatello, McKeesport, six rounds.

Frank Fraschetter of Rumford Me. and K. O. Larsen, Berlin, N. H. are to clash in the feature boxing match at Berlin City Hall, Berlin, N. H. tomorrow night.

The postponed boxing bout between Jack Rivic, Scranton, Pa., and George Levine, Brooklyn, will be run off next Monday night at the Motor Square Garden, Pittsburgh.

Two Baltimore boys, Lou Stevers and Bobbie Garrity, have been matched to meet in the feature bout of the Olympic Club in their home city April 16.

LEWIS TO RISK TITLE AGAINST 'BIG' MUNN

Another great wrestling match is looked for on next Thursday night at the Boston Arena when Ed "Strangler" Lewis holder of the world's championship belt, clashes with "Big" Wayne Munn, in a finish match best two falls in three.

New England fans have been clamoring to see this match for some time. Promoter Paul Bowser has a $5,000 guarantee from each of the grapplers that they will appear in this match.

There will also be four other bouts one fall to a finish, which will precede the main event. The contestants in these bouts will be announced later.

BROOKLYN LOSES TWICE IN PRO COURT TILTS

New York, April 9 (A.P.).—Brooklyn, twice defeated by Cleveland in the series for the American professional basketball championship, makes its stand on its home court at the 71st Regiment Armory here tonight.

This series between the Eastern and Western champions of the American League will be decided by the winning of three out of five games. Cleveland won at Cleveland Wednesday and last night.

WAGNER JOINS STAFF OF COLUMBIA COACHES

New York, April 9 (A.P.).—Red Wagner, end on the Columbia football team last Fall, has been selected as a member of the 1926 coaching staff, which will comprise Head Coach Charles F. Chevalier, William L. Murray, John C. Depler, Frank Bi. V. Brodil and Bliss Price.

Depler is the veteran of the staff, having assisted Buck O'Neill three years ago.

Seek Suzanne and Helen for Charity Match

PARIS, April 9 (I.N.S.).—Suzanne Lenglen and Helen Wills may meet in a match for charity in California at New Year's, 1927, according to an announcement made today by William H. Pickens, representatives of C. C. Pyle, who returned here today from Nice, where he states he secured tentative acceptances by Mlle. Lenglen of an offer to go to the United States to appear in motion pictures.

Mlle. Lenglen has set her own price for her appearance in the motion pictures, and Pickens is now returning to the United States for conferences to determine whether the price set by Suzanne is acceptable to the American promoters.

TWO ADDITIONAL B. A. A. MARATHON ENTRIES

Two runners have contributed their signed entry blanks to the collection of Manager Tom Kanaly of the B. A. A. Marathon, bringing the total up to sixty-one.

The latest men to signify their intentions of toiling in the Patriots' Day race are Otto Almquist of Quincy and Charles C. Morgan, from New York city, who represents the United States Army.

YALE POLOISTS RETAIN COLLEGE POLO CROWN

New York, April 9 (A.P.).—Once again Yale University reigns in the first ranks of the indoor collegiate polo players, and a string of victories in the competition extending over four years is unbroken.

Yale defeated Pennsylvania Military College here last night 10 goals to minus 2½ in the finals. Harvard the only other entrant for intercollegiate honors, was defeated by Penn Military here last week.

POOR CONDITION MENACES MAJOR LEAGUE BALL CLUBS

YANKS HIT FAIR PACE IN TRIALS

Davis Walsh Predicts Braves Will Give Rivals a Hard Fight This Spring

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service Sports Editor.

New York, April 9.—Only four days to go to the official opening of the major league season but from all accounts today some of the ball clubs are as much as a month "away" from championship speed. The National League field is particularly late in its development. The St. Louis Cardinals being the only apparently exception worthy of note.

Of the American League entries, however, no less than five, namely the Senators, Athletics, Browns, White Sox and Yankees, seem to be ready.

The Pirates have been hampered by the temporary loss of Lazzeri, Traynor and Moore and the bad weather.

The Giants left Sarasota with quite a ball club but Kelly and Frisch lost their batting eyes en route, and the only pitcher who now seems ready is Jimmy Ring.

The Reds' development has been retarded by Lopez's troubles and the semi failure of Emmer as a shortstop. The Braves should be a right fair Spring outfit.

The Phillies need a first baseman, Fenney having failed to make the riffle, and are short on pitchers. The Dodgers infield is said to be terrible.

The Cubs never were much, but Alexander's injury has just about made the thing official.

The Yankees have come up from nowhere to serious consideration angely through the development of juvenile second-base combination of Lazzeri and Koenig.

The Senators have started to hit and look good at this moment. The Athletics seem to have everything and the Browns are said to be moving very fast.

The Indians started the training season with infield weakness of which in no wise were relieved by the incident whereby Hostetler the $50,000 recruit, broke a leg.

COACH DRIVES MALDEN HIGH BALL CLUB

By EDDIE DONDERO.

With the opening game of the season carded for next Wednesday, everybody on the Malden High baseball roster is hustling at the earnest request of Coach Starr King. Some horrible individual whispered the news to the Malden mentor that Burdett College, Malden's opponents in the curtain-raiser, had a pretty good ball club, one that would be troublesome to any schoolboy nine, so he has ordered work, work and more work.

Coach King had his hopefuls pegging the apple indoors until they got dizzy. With the nucleus of a championship club on deck, optimism prevails. There are seven veterans accompanied by replacement material which is plentiful.

Captain John Callahan at first base, Jimmy Mangan at second, Herb Gaudette at shortstop, and the diminutive Ralph Marston at the hot corner, composes a veteran infield quartet. All possess baseball brains, speed and keen batting eyes. Phil Cummings, the seasoned backstop, is the most dangerous batsman on the outfit. He has been handling three rookie twirlers this Spring with much success.

George Trickey, Bob Smith and Erb are mound specialists who can make the horsehide do the tango. None of these youths did much flinging last season, gaining most of their experience on the sandlots.

CUTTING PLAYS GOULD FOR TENNIS LAURELS

New York, April 9 (A.P.).—C. Suydam Cutting of this city will meet Jay Gould of Philadelphia tomorrow for the national amateur court tennis title.

Cutting gained the challenger's position yesterday by defeating George Huband of Chicago, 6—6, 6—0, 6—4, 6—0, in the finals of the Racquet and Tennis club tournament.

Although Gould, champion for 16 years, is still undecided as to whether he will defend his title again, his friends assert that he will take the courts against Cutting tomorrow.

Lipton, 76, Still on Trail of America's Cup

NEW YORK, April 9 (A.P.).—A quarter century quest of the America's cup today finds Sir Thomas Lipton, here on a visit, still eager at the age of seventy-six to press on for the elusive yachting trophy, an ambition which has outlived four straight defeats and an expenditure of close to $10,000,000.

Except to affirm his intention of challenging for the cup next October in anticipation of a series of races in July, 1927, Sir Thomas indicated that his plans were indefinite.

Tufts May Cancel Baseball Opener

Tufts baseball team is listed to play its first game of the season tomorrow against Northeastern at the Oval. The playing field is in poor condition at the present time however, and the game may have to be canceled.

The Jumbo squad, which was cut to twenty-four players early in the week, has been working diligently and from all appearances the Engineers will meet with pretty stiff opposition.

It is hard to predict who will get the twirling assignment. Shuman and Robinson, veterans and Cunningham, Stanley, H. Bowker Marshal, Smith and Philips, recruits, are all ready to serve up the leather.

Harvard and B. U. Play Tomorrow

If the weather permits, a strong Boston University baseball team will cross the Charles tomorrow to meet the Crimson on Soldiers Field in the first baseball contest of the year. Neither team has had enough practice to present a mid-season battle, and there was some talk among Harvard authorities of postponing the game.

The Harvard team is in all probability the better prepared of the two. The Terrier team, however, will be a stronger one than has represented the Back Bay institution in some time. Donald, captain-elect of the harvard Gridsters, will undoubtedly start in the box for the Terriers.

SHARKEY AND M'CARTHY TO CLASH FOR TITLE

Rival Heavies Clash at Arena April 19

By JACK CONWAY

JACK SHARKEY, New England heavyweight, was today matched to meet Pat McCarthy of Roxbury in a ten-round bout under the direction of the Boston Arena Club at the St. Botolph street playhouse on the evening of April 19.

This match has been hanging fire for several months. The big fellows originally were signed to clash at a Suffolk A. A. show early in February. McCarthy was then stricken with an attack of grip and the frolic was postponed until the latter part of February. Sharkey next injured his right hand smacking around Eddie Huffman at Madison Square Garden and once more the contest was set back.

Jack Conway

The third postponement was attributed to another attack of grip suffered by McCarthy. Sharkey took on King Solomon instead and gave him an artistic passing.

As soon as the championship bout was closed today, Sharkey and McCarthy both started light training.

Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's pilot, has sent to New York for a couple of husky sparring partners, while Jim McDonald, who cares for the business affairs of the McCarthy concern, is also seeking several huskies to work out with the Roxbury Adonis.

DeMar-Kennedy Out to Win B.A.A. Run

By STED CHANDLER.

Only two former winners have already entered the B. A. A. Marathon, the big Patriots' Day race, but more will undoubtedly come in before the entries close.

Both of the men now entered are among the most popular of the local athletes, and both are out to win. And it is safe to say that Clarence De Mar and Bill Kennedy will take a lot of beating. Neither of them are by any means strippings. They know the game and love it or they would not have stayed in competition for so long.

Sted Chandler

The tenor of these veterans' thoughts was expressed in the letter received by Tom Hanafy from Kennedy.

"I am going to win the B. A. A. Marathon again; I may not do it this year, but if I don't, I'll do it next year or the year after. I am not through."

Kennedy would be a popular winner. He always receives a big hand no matter where he finishes and if by outlasting the field he can add his to crash through against the odd which he will meet in the Lauren event, would go over strong with any crowd.

De Mar, like Bill, is a hot weather runner and if Patriots' Day is any lucky break of fortune should turn up bright and clear we would always tell from where you sit as to the fellow behind you looks like stronger things have happened.

As for De Mar, he is perhaps the most enthusiastic and faithful distance runner of them all. Not a few times it is that what the Melrose puller gets further than many men do in a lifetime. He's always in shape.

Nothing has been heard yet from Mamie Rau, the Canadian, or Frank Zuna, who finished second last year, or for that matter from Chuck Mellor, last year's winner. But these men as has been remarked before, are unlucky fate arrives, and many runners will come in their blanks on race with those of the club they represent.

Grim Went Down 18 Times

JIM BARRY, the Chicago light heavyweight, gave Mr. Joseph Grim, of Philadelphia, an awful lacing at the Old Dry Dock Club, Avenue C and Tenth street, September 23, 1907. Grim hit the canvas for the count eighteen times during the six rounds.

The referee called them to the centre of the ring and slipped them big instructions. He then announced the pair of warriors to the fans.

Clang! went the gong, and off they went. Mr. Grim stepped aroun Hwely. It seemed as though he knew something of Barry's slam an wasn't exactly going to wag his face at it.

They clinched and stalled and pulled about, and then Barry shot five or six stiff lefts and rights to the body which brought forth from Mr Grim numerous groans and grunts. They were not in the right place to cause his legs to fold up, so he saw the round out nicely and walked to his corner covered with smiles.

Barry Goes Off Like a Roman Candle

BARRY went off like a Roman candle in the second round and, catching Joe ducking, lifted him off his feet onto the mat with a left and right. Joe arose at the count of nine with his seat covered with resin.

He gamely waded in for more, and was not disappointed, for Mr. Barry came thoroughly prepared and was generously itself. He whopped Joe on the puss with another and, like an elevator, Joe dropped. He listened for the count of nine and arose, bruised up a whole lot.

His right eye was closing and his face was as red as a summer sunset. He grabbed at Barry and held on, taking a few more in the body that dropped him again. It looked as though Joe was gone and there was excitement to burn. Once more he got up and they were mixing fiercely on the ropes when the gong sounded.

Barry, thinking that he might slip a few over to help a little, banged away at Joe and then Joe unbuttoned a few on Barry. There was a wild howl all over the house. Every one seemed to jump up and yell as Grim backed Barry into the latter's corner and continued to fight. The timekeeper almost broke his back banging the bell, and the seconds jumped into the fray.

Mr. Grimm's seconds, remembering the old adage, "A friend in need is a friend indeed," swarmed over to where he was battling the enemy.

Everybody seemed to be slamming everybody else, and one of the barbers who was behind Grim found a loose belt some place and walloped the very busy Mr. Barry in the stomach with it.

As Mr. Barry was as busy as a bird dog trying to save his carcass this didn't seem to be according to Hoyle, and immediately the air was full of left-over swings and hooks, and a dark object was seen flitting toward the exit.

Everybody in Line Lets Go a Sock

EVERYBODY on the line of march let fly a sock, and the first thing we knew the barber was out on the car track. He went in a card later, saying the reason for his poor showing was that he "broke his arm."

He never came back, however, and in the meantime Barry and Grim had been broken apart and were led to their respective camps.

Joe was pretty much the worse for wear now, and in the next round dived to the floor six times from a variety of socks. In the fourth he rested but once from a left in the soup tureen, and in the fifth took three rests.

The sixth and last round was a tough one, as Josie was forced to the floor on five different occasions.

Some of the time he didn't know whether he was in hock or in jail, I always clambered up before the fatal tenth second was tolled. He finished the fight bleeding and with a swollen bunk, looking through one eye and feeling his sore jaw. Mr. Grim had a few words to say, however, as bunged up as he was, he spoke them.

"Gentlemen, I tells you on the straights," said Mr. Grim, raising one hand in the air, "I didn't take the count so much in my life before, an I want to fight Jimmy de Jeff for $1,000."

The new date for the testimonial to George V. Tuohey is Thursday April 22, at the Boston Arena. This replaces April 8, which Mr. Tuohey insisted on cancelling so as not to conflict with the Conway Benefit.

Another thing that Mr. Tuohey has insisted on is that the main events be actual contests between wrestlers for purses commensurate with the reputation and ability, to be on winner and loser basis and go a finish. P.A. is pippin pipe tobacco

THOSE fellows who get so much fun out of a pipe—don't envy them . . . emulate them! Get yourself a jimmy-pipe and a tidy red tin of Prince Albert. That's what they did, and look at them. Wearing smiles a mile wide. Puffing away on good old P. A. and happy as ducklings in their first rain-storm.

There's no trick about it . . . no deep, dark secret. P. A. is pippin pipe tobacco, made for pleasure and lots of it. Prince Albert is mellow as moonlight on a silent summer sea. Fragrant as a breeze that filters through apple-blossoms. Cool and sweet in a way that spells comfort to a pipe-smoker.

Not the least of P. A.'s virtues is the kindly way it treats a fellow's tongue. The Prince Albert process cut out bite and parch years ago, thereby opening the gates to smoke-peace for millions of ——. No matter how hard you smoke P. A., there is no protest from your tongue or throat.

To make sure that you are not missing the full enjoyment of your pipe, go to the nearest tobacco shop and tell the man you want a tidy red tin of Prince Albert. He knows of hundreds of men that have found the enjoyment that's waiting for you. There's a revelation coming to you with a pipe—and P. A.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal glass humidors with sponge-moistener tops. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

BUDGET BEATS 'WAGES FOR WIVES'

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

By KATHERINE BROOKS and MARTHA LEE
NUMBER TWENTY-TWO

A word to Husbands and Fathers:

(Wives needn't listen, but if they do, they will hear only good of themselves.)

Do you know, menfolks, that the wives of some of you are underpaid?

"Why, my wife doesn't work for wages!" (Do I hear that reply?)

Maybe not, but she works hard, and her reward is small. Take this case, contained in a letter from an uncomplaining wife: "My husband brings home $26 every week and keeps out $5 for his lunches and smokes."

Out of the rest she had to feed, clothe and house the family, and give the children needed (or them) amusements. Still we are just couldn't be done, and she writes:

This husband chooses to need to be generous. He thinks he keep only comforts and gives her every dollar. But the fact that he kept was a type of selfishness anyone else in the family still

The best way to have an helper is for husband and wife to work together on it, not for one to give "allowance." When the husband finds how little he can live on himself, after her hard work of cooking, washing, tending baby, sewing and house cleaning, she will realize how he will be forced into a new and a new system.

Many wives say, "I prefer for themselves—no more [illegible] ment, no more [illegible] of [illegible]. Their one thought is to keep the husband and [illegible] fed and happy.

Think it over, men!

Mrs. I. A., Lowell, Mass., send your name and address to The Home Budget Editor, as there is a message for you at this office from another reader.

Home Budget Editor—We have a family of three and a income of $39 a week. We pay $30 a month rent, not including heat. We have a debt of $200 which we are trying to pay off. Could you help us divide our income? L. C. Griffin.

With such a large debt, I suggest a very large percentage of saving, which will go weekly toward that big bill. Try saving $10—many families larger than yours are living on $29 a week, which you will have left. If you can do this your debt will be cleared in a very short time, wise, see if some member of the family cannot add to the income for a while. Trial budget: Saving, $10; rent, $30; food, $6; fuel, $2; light, $1; clothing, $3; personal, $4; car, $2; insurance, $2.59; other savings, $12.60.

Mrs. F. W. O'K.—You are carrying a very large insurance, and if it is a burden with your husband's reduced salary, I would suggest talking it over with the insurance people and seeing if you cannot cash in some of it. You could thus establish a savings bank account. A budget sheet is being sent you.

Mrs. E. F. K.—Living in the country, it seems to me your food bill ought to be less than $15.97 a week. Try and work out some of your own problems yourself on checking and other things. I suggest this budget, which you can try, using an sheet that is being sent you: Saving, $2.50; rent, $7.50, food, $12; cloth ing, $4.97; operating, $3; personal, $1.50.

Mrs. L. E. Your [illegible] to, which are weekly and wilful are monthly items. Study this budget in today's column, and if they do not help you write again.

Home Budget Editor.—Our family consists of seven and our income averages $50 a week when I am working—$38 when I am not. My problems are many. I have a great habit of putting off paying some of my bills so as to get something else that is needed, and getting things and waiting till saturday to pay for them. My income is spent before I get it.

MRS. M. O'K.

You have told of your own weaknesses so frankly that I am sure you can correct them. Make a plan to get your bills paid first, then put aside a certain sum each week for different items, so when the time comes to buy them you will have the money. Your rent is low, and you are very wise to own your house. Your food at $12.10, for food and milk, is very reasonable for seven. Try this budget for $50 a week: Saving, $7.40; this includes your insurance, Christmas Club and $2 weekly for health and other emergencies; shelter, $9.90; food, $12.10; clothing, $14; operating (furnace, light, etc.), $4.50; personal, $4.10.

Home Budget Editor.—I am a young girl of 18 and have been working for a year and a half. I am getting $15 a week and have been paying $5 a week board. I have been trying to keep it up, but it is hard. Can you help me with a budget for the amount I get? $1.17 for board, $5 for [illegible], $2.50 for clothes, $4.50 for eating out, $1 for [illegible], $3 for personal. $17.17.

Miss F. A. P.

I am delighted to print Miss F. A. P.'s budget, for it shows what can be done with determination to "get ahead." They are saving more than one-third of their income, which would be a burden to most people, but with some definite object in view, they will feel repaid. Here is the budget for a single girl: If to me there is [illegible] $5; clothes, $2; operating, $6 (automobile, electricity, personal, etc.), food, $6; insurance, $2.59, other savings, $12.60.

Mrs. F. W. O'K.—You are carrying a very large insurance, and if it is a burden with your husband's reduced salary, I would suggest talking it over with the insurance people and seeing if you cannot cash in some of it. You could thus establish

The Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

As I said this I turned on my heel and started toward the stairs. I felt that my brutality was probably as offensive as it was illuminating. If I had cleared the air at the cost of two people's regard, it still seemed not only right but inevitable that I should. In the solution of the situation I hadn't created but had to see through.

Certainly [illegible] I [illegible] down. A reaction of the silence above—a vital, electric silence in which two people were probably finding themselves and an honest attitude toward each other. I felt this. Jeanie and Nicholas Perry were entitled to this moment—and that Pat himself wouldn't begrudge it to them if he knew of it.

"But he doesn't know," I told myself. "And in spite of the fact that it was his tragic entanglement with Brooke De Courcey and Jeanie's finding it out through Lucie Tremaine that projected these heartaches, I'm not sure Pat would understand—or that I am willing to be around when he finds out how Nicholas Perry froze his hands, or how much Jeanie thought she owed to her "stub."

And all during the long day that followed I was so intent on whether or not Pat was going to add himself to the odd assortment of folks at The Birches, that I missed a few of the lights and shades cast by events taking place right around me. In looking back I recall the tableaux that greeted me when I first came down stairs after the old triangular conference with Nicholas Perry and Jeanie.

Arlette Valleau was sitting on a stool at Jim's feet. Bertie Lingard was sprawled on the floor with his head in his hands and his eyes on the Valleau girl. And Tarascon stood in the doorway of the kitchen peeling a potato and watching Jim and Bertie as they gave their almost worshipful attention to Arlette.

The girl was singing—crooning a little French Canadian boat song in a high, clear lyric soprano which had the guy freedom of a bird's song and some of the vibrations of a golden bell. Jim was leaning forward with his lips parted and his eyes alight.

Bertie Lingard was gazing up at Arlette like a charmed bird, and Tarascon was gaping like a victim of adenoids. I was so enchanted by the beauty of the girl's voice that I too stood and gaped. And it was not until later that I began to be irritated and angered by the recollection of the tableau which presented itself in various formations all day long.

The only person who did not hang on Arlette's notes like one in a dream, was Nicholas Perry. Was his whole attitude [illegible] gic? Jeanie spent [illegible] day in bed. She said she was [illegible] and I could well believe it. And I was glad she was in her room sleeping when Dr. Willis appeared later in the day with a stout sledge on which he and Tarascow took Nicholas Perry home, with Arlette trailing along obediently to care for the invalid.

"I wonder if Nicholas Perry—or Dr. Willis—will tell that child of her relationship to the doctor." I was thinking as I watched the procession trail away over the snow.

The sound of a sleigh bells startled me out of my reverie. I turned from right to left and beheld a sleigh approaching opposite to that which Nicholas Perry's escort was taking. And a moment later Pat Dalton drove up to our door.

"Has Jean's gone?" he gasped

"Gone?" I repeated

"With Perry." Pat muttered

"WORDS OF WISDOM"

GREETINGS, everybody!

"What shall I give my daughter for a wedding present that will be more than ornamental yet not a veiled hint to 'work for the night is coming'?"

Do you need three guesses as to my answer? The very first thing that came into my mind was a shining white porcelain electric refrigerator. Surely the would be more than an ornament, and yet would not suggest drudgery—from which this devoted Dad seems most anxious to protect his best and only daughter.

Imagine the pride and pleasure a bride would take in displaying this shining ear-mark of the modern home to admiring—and a bit envious—visitors, letting them "see the wheels go round" in the simple motor that keeps the freezing element circulating through the coils, and hearing them marvel at the almost human little thermostat that promptly shuts off the electric current when the temperature of the chest reaches the proper coldness.

And imagine the compliments she will receive for the delicious dishes she can serve them straight from the frigid zone!

Shall I spread once again the simple principles of electric refrigeration? There are really only two parts—first the freezing unit that goes into the compartment ordinarily used for ice, and second, the mechanical unit that takes the heat from the refrigerator and leaves it cold—colder than you had ever thought an ice chest could be. This compact little unit may be built in the basement and the two little half inch pipes carried up through the floor, or it can be installed underneath, alongside, or above the refrigerator, according to space available. The connection is made with your electric lighting circuit, and once the current is turned on, you simply forget refrigeration. Your ice chest will stay cold week in and week out, without further attention, at considerably less expense than the amount of your former ice bills.

I do want those of you who are thinking of purchasing a refrigerator this month to think twice before tying yourself up to the uncertainty and inconvenience of an old-fashioned ice chest. While the initial expense of an electric refrigerator is undeniably higher than the old style, the cost can be budgeted by the convenient club plan. You are not buying a passing luxury such as a fur coat—and the price of even the cheapest fur coat would buy a scrumptious electric refrigerator—you are not buying for today or tomorrow. You are buying food safety for years and years to come—for food spoilage is reduced to a minimum in the iciest icechest. In the safety zone of 40 to 50 degrees, maintained in an electric refrigerator, bacteria multiply only about 1-400 as rapidly as in a temperature of 50 to 60, which is the average of the ice-cooled chest. There is no moisture and clamminess in the electric ice box. The air is dry and actually frosty, having the crispness of a frosty night.

They tell us that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing, so I've tried to acquire a whole lot of reliable information on this interesting subject of electric refrigeration. I'll gladly share it with you if you'll let me know how many there are in your family and whether you are interested in purchasing the complete electrical refrigerator outfit or what to install the freezing units in your present chest.

'Bye till tomorrow.

PLAY WITH YOUR CHILDREN

HAVE you ever noticed how few parents have ever really learned to be children with their children? You even see the strange anomaly of parents playing with other people's children and not with their own. It is the uncles, aunts, cousins, friends who play with THEIR children.

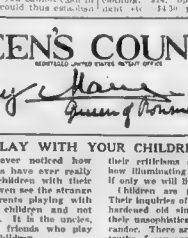
With pride I can say that I have played with my own children, with other people's children, and with my grandchildren.

I like playing with them. I can put myself on their level, get inside, so to say, of their mentalities. I can invent glorious games and I am instinctively a story-teller. That is how I began to write—by putting down the fairy tales I made up for my children.

Once we start playing together I see a thousand ways by which I can heighten the pleasure and the thrill. When I read aloud to them, instinctively I act the emotions of the people about whom we are reading. This makes the tale more real, more lively. I see the child's eyes devouring my face, its little hands, brows, lips, imitating mine until, together, we are actually living the marvelous events of which the story tells.

Each child is so different from each other one, each little brain works in so individual a way! We can learn so much from a child "From the tongues of babes and fools——" It is a true old saying. And children's judgments upon us, their rebukes of our behavior, how illuminating and instructive, if only we will listen!

Children are perfectly logical. Their laughter often embarrasses us hardened old sinners because of their unsophisticated and absolute candor. There are never any halfs truths, I can assure you, when I am with a child. I pull myself together and weigh my self-love as I would with the severest judge. I take jolly good care of what I say, for I know I shall be called to order without pity if it is not honest and essentially right.



My daughter, the little Serbian Queen, is an excellent, reasonable and at the same time passionate mother.

Once in the castle with her I asked, "Where is Peterkin?"

"I have shut him up with his father," said she.

"Why?"

"Because his father must learn to know him as well as his mother. Fathers seldom know their sons. It is best to begin early. For the moment Sandro and Peterkin are shy with each other. If I am always with them, they instinctively turn to me—and that's not playing the game. They must learn to settle their own problems together. Besides, I assure you, Mama, although Sandro is an excellent King and rules his country well, two-year-old Peterkin can teach him many things."

Thus spoke a very young mother—and she spoke the truth.

Music Will Help You

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D., Former President of the American Medical Association.

WHETHER you sing or not, there are a few things about singing that you ought to know. Most methods of singing instruction are founded chiefly on exercise of the part of the throat called the larynx.

Mlle. Jantet, a singing instructress of Geneva, has pointed out that sing ing should not be based exclusively on exercise of the larynx but on a rationally designed exercise of the whole breathing apparatus.

Singing is an art of normal physiology.

It is the real vocal expression of rounded life, which speaking is a substitute devised for the purpose of civilized intercourse.

The newly born infant does not speak, but sings naturally, and the majority of more or less illiterate peasant communities, especially the Russian, have good singing voices.

In the big towns, however, a good singing voice is becoming rare and rarer. The more people speak the less easily does singing come to them.

Mlle. Jantet reinstructs them, as pointed out by Dr. Marechal Gazette des Hopitaux, by an easy series of exercises in this natural function and teaches them to sing naturally.

Her pupils allow their voices to proceed without useless and more or less imaginary contractions of the larynx, an organ which is very difficult to control by the will.

It is sufficient at first to obtain clear articulation.

Teaching a pupil to place his voice is a fairly method, as it cramps the sound. The vocal organs should be guided by the sense of hearing. It would seem, then, is for this purpose that they are placed between the ears and the lungs.

Our habit of speech has restricted our breath and, if we learn to breathe fully and rhythmically, we have almost learned to sing.

Bad habits of breathing are almost universal—and if a person cannot sing through defective breathing both his general and psychical health must be gravely amiss.

Many conditions that pass muster as anaemia, rickets, chronic bronchitis and latent or semblatent tuberculosis are really the results of bad breathing.

These sufferers from voluntary or partly voluntary semi-asphyxiation are in the majority in our towns and cause a large part of the social hygiene problem.

This trouble is closely linked to tuberculosis, but the various forms of physical exercise that will cure it are still unpopular. This may be because they are dull, which is one of the few defects of the excellent Swedish system.

Mlle. Jantet's method is not only interesting but artistic. Her linking up of respiratory training with song as parallel to the practice of former experimentors in linking physical training to music or dancing.

"YOU don't need to bother about driving me to the Reservoir Peter," Sylvia said evasively, as they went along Beacon street. "I know you are trying to keep me from knowing who was in that car. But I do know—I saw Ranny and the red hair as we passed—"

Her shaking voice we won't let her go on. She stopped, and made a gallant effort to pull herself together

But it was of no use. She broke down suddenly and began to cry.

There are times when nothing takes the place of a good cry in a woman's life. Times when she has to cry, or go all to pieces. And Peter knew that this was one of those times, for Sylvia

He drove very quietly, not saying a word, and not moving. For Sylvia's head was on his shoulder, and she was sobbing out her misery and wretchedness on the sleeve of his new Fall overcoat

He smiled rather bitterly. This was surely the irony of fate—that the woman he loved should be crying on his shoulder because of her jealous love for another man

Presently Sylvia raised her head.

She mustn't do this, she told herself. Peter was in love with her And so it wasn't fair to put her head on his shoulder—to tempt him with her nearness. He was trembling now, a little, as it was. She drew herself sharply, almost angrily, away from him

"Take me home," she commanded briefly and to the point

When they reached the Beacon street flat Ranny's car had vanished

A half hour later, when she was undressing, she opened her little silver evening bag to take out her handkerchief. There, tucked in was a $20 bill. Sarah had held her bag for her while she sang. Sarah had probably taken this way of paying her!

Who Was the Girl

"But I can take money from her —from my friends" Sylvia thought, in an agony of shame. Oh, if Ranny only did what was right, people wouldn't offer her money when she sang for them. They wouldn't pity her and feel that she was sorry she had to earn her living. And not only her own living, but the baby's living too. Ranny hadn't contributed a penny toward the upkeep of the house since August.

The door opened toward 92 o'clock and he came in. He looked almost ugly

"Who was the girl in the red hat?" she drawled

Ranny's color matched hers with its slow persistence. "Oh, that's it," he picked up, walking home on her nerves, work, so she said," he answered. He walked into the bedroom and closed the door of it behind him

Sylvia longed to follow him. She wanted to make him, as a mother might shake her wicked young son because he had picked up a girl on the street. And at the same time, she wanted to go to him, and beg him not to desecrate their love as he was doing—not to drag it in the gutter!

"Ranny, how could you pick up a strange girl in the street?" Sylvia asked him later. "How could you do such a thing?"

"Why shouldn't I?" he asked lightly, "you were doing something I didn't want you to do, weren't you? I told you I didn't want you to sing in public, and you did it, anyhow. You went out and left me here, alone. Is it any of your business how I amused myself while you were gone?"

"The reason you want over to Willie's for one was to show off before Pet," Ranny went on darkly. "And it all planned to make yourself—even the ride home with him!"

Sylvia's eyes widened with amazement. "Well, my goodness! There wasn't anything wrong in his bringing me home, was there?"

"You'd like me to think you're Little Miss Innocence, wouldn't you?" Ranny was saying now, as he watched her with narrowed eyes. "You'd like me think there's nothing between you and Peter! But let me ask you something! What were you doing in Peter Wilke' house, alone with him, one night last August? Answer me that!"

"Why—I never was in Peter's house alone with him, was I?" she asked, her mind going rapidly back over her past life. "Let me think—" But she could not recall a time when she had been alone with Peter in his house

Sylvia Explains

She shook her head "No" she said, "No—" But just then she remembered! She remembered the night last August when she and Peter had stopped in at the Wilk house to get a bottle of brandy

She laughed, with sudden relief

"Oh, yes, of course, I remember now! Peter brought me here from the inn, that day you were taken sick And on the way he stopped in at his house to get you some old brandy he had," she explained carefully. "But we weren't in the house more than a minute Now in the world did you ever hear about it, anyway?"

Without answering her, he nodded his head wisely. "Never you mind how I heard about it. Only you'd never get over it if my mother found out and tell her your side of the story. That's all."

Suddenly she remembered how she had seen a woman walk past Peter's house that night last August, just as she had stopped out of the car

She got the words almost wrong from Mother Phelps' own dear lips. "Miss Gould, my dressmaker, lives just a block or two from the Wilks' house she explained, "And she almost jumped out of her skin when she saw me and Peter go into his house that night

Who ever dreamed that you were taking that bottle of brandy to poor Fanny! She came straight here the next morning and told me that—and Peter had been out drinking together

I'm only sorry I didn't come straight to you with the tale when I first heard it, Sylvia," said Mother Phelps. "I might have known there wasn't any truth in it"

"Speaking of operations, I want to ask you and Fanny to a party," Lolly said when mother went out "It starts at my house with cock tails, and winds up at Sally King's with a dance

The idea was this: Two could give a party much more cheaply than one, as Lolly and Sally King both had been left flat by their husbands, decided to give one together. Lolly was to pay for the sandwiches and the cock tails and Sally was to provide the jazz orchestra.

Girl in Red Hat

For both Thomas Boyle and Woody King were paying for their little bungalows in Milton, and their wives had agreed to economize for ten years

Sylvia, who had told Ranny about the party, he said grudgingly that he would go. "Unless Peter Wilk's been invited," he added, scowling

He no longer believed Miss Gould's highly romantic story of Sylvia and Peter and the brandy bottle, but nevertheless, it had served to make him dislike Peter more than ever!

After long thought and much counting of her own pennies, Sylvia made up her mind to buy a new dress for the party. Long afterward, she decided that it must have been her guardian angel that told her to buy the dress!

For she was very beautiful in its cloth of silver, spangled—and she needed all her beauty and her lure that night, as she seldom had needed them before

Ten minutes after she walked into Lolly's she came in, with a handsome young man whom "Woody" King hailed as "Bellows, old sport!" They slapped each other on the shoulders—Woody and Bellows—with an air of old friends, while the girl stood smiling from them to Sylvia

But Sylvia did not smile back at her. She was looking at the girl's hat—a tiny red thing, as bright as a scarlet tanager. On one side of it flashed a huge rhinestone buckle.

She had seen that hat before, and the girl, too! She was the girl who had been in the car with Ranny that October night, when Peter had tried to keep Sylvia from seeing them!

Who Occupies a Unique Place in the Writing World as an Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

"HOW'S Joe?" Emily asked Grace. She hadn't seen or heard from her friend Grace during a school term spent at a distant college

"Joe?" echoed Grace. Then a heartbroken look stole into her eyes "I don't know," she continued "Joe and I are not friends now.

"I'm sorry," replied Emily, regretting she had brought up an unhappy subject of conversation But Grace wanted to tell her friend of Joe had been devoted to Grace for many months His gladly accepted her friendship, hoping to win her love

Then came a day when he was seriously injured He was sent to the hospital For weeks he was ill, and Grace learned that she cared more for Joe than for anyone else in the world

She went to see him every day in the hospital and did all she could for him But as he grew better and failed to return Grace's kindness, Grace began to suspect that he no longer cared for her

It never occurred to her that an expensive sojourn at the hospital, involving months of idleness, might cause Burrage—even an engagement of marriage—financially Impossible Instead, she began to suspect that Joe was interested in the pretty nurse who cared for him so efficiently

This suspicion grew so unendurable that Grace ceased calling at the hospital nursery writing Joe that she would be glad to do anything she could for him as a friend She even returned two gift books he sent her on his illness

Week by week he met Joe, now fully recovered He asked why she had returned the books

In an evil harassed way Grace murmured an entirely untrue excuse to the effect that she was seriously interested in some one else

She has learned that there was not the slightest sentiment between Joe and the pretty nurse, who has recently been married to another man Her suspicion was entirely mistaken yet she allowed it to wreck a friendship that was developing prettily and deeply each day

Emily was unable to persuade her friend to make a frank effort to save a long talk with Joe and so put the friendship back on the old basis Grace thinks whether Joe would care to see this old companionship She suspects he'd be too dis-

DEAR LADY CLANRICARDE,—To you as the sister of dear Lord Canning, I write to express my deep sorrow at his untimely end and to say how my beloved and precious husband and I valued and esteemed him, and how we looked to him to be of the greatest use to his Sovereign and country!

Your dear brother had gone through the greatest difficulties and dangers, supported by his dear and excellent wife, had triumphed over all, and shown such wisdom, moderation and courage! He was expected home to receive the honors and distinctions which his Sovereign so willingly bestowed on him, and the welcome of so many friends! On the eve of his return he loses her who was so devoted to him, and his Sovereign is bowed down with the loss of her own great and good husband, who was all in all to her and her country!

Under these circumstances Lord Canning returned to his native land God has taken him, and he is again with her after only seven months' separation! Oh! for her HOW blessed! How enviable is the lot also soon the partner of our life! How I pray it may be God will to let me follow mine soon! But for you all, and the country and me, your dear brother is a grievous loss'

"God Knows Best"

Memorandum by Queen Victoria

OSBORNE, 30th June 1862 —The loss of our dear valued and high-minded General Bruce (He had accompanied the Prince of Wales, as his Governor, on H. R. H.'s tour in the Near East. There he contracted fever and died shortly after the return home, on 27th June) is irreparable to the Queen, the poor Prince of Wales, and all of us, and has shaken her greatly. He possessed our (that is, the beloved Prince's and the Queen's) entire confidence, was a second father to our dear child, and a worthy servant and friend of her beloved Prince, whom he had gone to join so soon

But it is too mysterious, too dreadful to lose all the best and most valuable servants and friends, and to see the greatest and best taken.

God knows best.

The Prince of Wales is deeply grieved; he is greatly improved and most affectionate, dutiful and amiable, and only anxious to do whatever his Mother and Father wish

For the present Sir Charles Phipps, General Grey, Colonel Bid dulph are so good as to act in turn for the lamented General, and, later, the Queen will take good care to make such a selection as would meet her beloved husband's wishes.

(While still mourning the death of her beloved Prince Consort Queen Victoria found herself called on to give her eighteen year-old daughter, Princess Alice, in marriage to Prince Louis of Hesse The Queen describes the struggle of her emotions in her own diary.)

(Extract From the Queen's Journal.)

OSBORNE, 1st July, 1862 Scarcely got any sleep. Towards morning heard all the preparations for today's ceremony going on. It tried me terribly. Alice got up and came and kissed me, and I gave her my blessing and a prayer book, like one dear mama gave me on her happy wedding morning. Went with Colonel Biddulph to look at the dining-room, which was very prettily decorated, the altar being placed under our large family picture. All the furniture had been removed, and plants and flowers placed everywhere.

"A Terrible Moment"

The time had come, and I, in my "sad cap," as baby calls it, most sad on such a day, went down with our four boys, Bertie and Affie (Prince Alfred) leading me. It was a terrible moment for me. No one was in the room but the Archbishop of York the Archbishop of Canterbury not being well enough to come), the Dean of Windsor and Mr. Prothro, (afterward Canon of Westminster) who were in their places near the altar, Then all the guests came in, and the different Households I sat all the time in an armchair, Bertie and Affie close to me. The Hessian family stood opposite After her my blessing and a prayer book, like one dear mama gave me on her happy wedding morning. After another pause came the dear, dear Bride on her Uncle's arm, followed by the Bridesmaids, a touching sight. The service then commenced, the Archbishop performing it beautifully. Alice answered so distinctly and was full of dignity and self-possession. Louis also answered very distinctly. I restrained my tears, and had a great struggle all through, but remained calm

Style's speed limit seems to be exceeded by the little Mercury wings which, placed at each side of a small hat of crochet straw, are fast becoming one of the most popular trimmings for tailored millinery and offer a blessed relief from the novelty ping or grosgrain fancies with which so many models are trimmed

Extremes meet and match in the extreme. long silk stockings and the extremely short sleeve silk blouses that are of precisely the same shade The long and the short of this combination is, naturally, due to the fact that spring skirts have grown shorter and shorter

Modern Miss, appeals for a bed and dresser. Mother now obliged to sleep on two rugs on the floor. Has only a single bed for five There is a boy 13, and girls, 14, 9 and 6 all need clothing and mother can't make over anything. Father is dead

Mrs. Solomon Says---

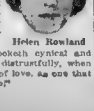
By Helen Rowland

VERILY, verily, my Daughter, how strange is the way of a woman with a man.

For, if men are "deceivers ever," then are women dissemblers, from the first touch unto the last kiss!

Lo, the innocent damsel rougeth her lips and darkeneth her lashes and pretendeth to be "hard-boiled."

But the multiple divorcee is milder than a Florida spring and sweeter than unskimmed milk; and NO man would think of kissing without first asking her to marry him



Helen Rowland

The flapper looketh cynical and winketh the eye distructfully, when a man speaketh of love, as one that saith, "Is ZAT so?"

But, the gold-digger amoureth the baby-stare and is SO startled! And, lo, she findeth a solitaire upon her finger, before the third kiss

The blonde tinteth her locks with henna, to give them "character"—and the brunette dippeth her hair in "golden glint."

How, then, shall a man know WHAT manner of woman he pursueth or what "surprise" he shall draw when he weddeth? Since, every woman seeketh to appear what she is NOT—and they are all "stardidled"!

Go to, Whatsoever a man may be, he is proud OF it. Yea, he boasteth, saying, "Lo, I am self made" or "I am a plain man," or "I am a devil!" But a woman longeth always to be "something different."

Yet she wondereth why she is "MISUNDERSTOOD"

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

SOME of the biz officials in Washington spend so much time greeting friends that they're thinking of chipping in and hiring an official handshaker.

WHAT they really need is a couple of artificial arms.

IF an official was busy in his office he could let you take the arm outside and shake it.

THEN when you got through with it you could pass it around to the other visitors.

HE could shake hands with everybody in the United States by mailing the arm around the country.

ARTIFICIAL limbs are made so perfectly nowadays that a lot of them get rheumatism.

ONE fellow's arm was so natural that the fingers got warts.

ANOTHER man wore a wooden leg that was so perfect that when he went to the hospital, the doctor told him he had varicose veins.

OFFICIALS in Washington are rushed to death and while they busy have two hands they manage to keep one of them in our pockets all the time.

THEY should really have an extra arm in order to pat themselves on the back.

AS soon as a fellow gets a nice clean shirt and a swell pair of cuff buttons he wants to be a diplomat so that he can shake hands with everybody.

HE'S willing to sacrifice his knuckles for his country.

ONE diplomat was so glad to see a friend of his that he threw three fingers out of joint.

HE shook so many hands last year that his thumbs are beginning to rattle.

DAILY SHORT STORY

ANNE AND THE BLACK SHEEP

By Wm. B. Robinson

MRS. JONAS-GULICK, nee Sally Jones, regarded those in her pay merely as means to her ends. To her not very subtle mind they were on a plane with her husband's blooded horses, or with the bright, new pieces of period furniture in her cluttered mansion.

That was the reason why she so often consulted Anne Merrill in the presence of her social secretary, Anne Algulowa. Anne's quiet, well-erring ways had something to do with the condition, perhaps, as well as the fact that Anne strove always to hide her fresh, young beauty under neutral exterior. Beauty and charm in a social secretary whose employer is pudgy and stupid are dangerous assets. So Anne affected plain dresses and common-sense heels, concealed her straight, graceful figure, parted her brown hair plainly to conceal some of its natural waving stiffness, and hid her intelligent brown eyes with shell-rimmed spectacles.

"I'm worried about Harold," Mrs. Jonas-Gulick remarked to the back of Anne's shapely head as the owner bent over her desk addressing invitations to socially prominent ladies who would later send regrets.

"Mr. Harold's mistakes are natural to his sex," Anne felt called upon to murmur in reply.

Her employer immediately froze. "You forget yourself, Miss Meadows," she said coldly. "My son's conduct is above reproach."

"I am sorry," Anne apologized. "You misunderstood me; I did not mean to imply anything else."

Harold, the only offspring of the Jonas-Gulick's, was a rather handsome young fellow some three years Anne's senior. He was just then in the process of "sowing his wild oats"; and, though he had never been known to do anything low or vile, yet the thoroughness with which he threw himself into his card playing, reckless driving and drinking, sometimes frightened his parents.

There was a note of tragedy behind Harold's recklessness. He had been educated at fancy schools where most of the students could and did trace their ancestry clear back to the prolific William the Conqueror. Here, since Harold's father had laid the foundation of his fortune by the manufacture of a laundry soap, the boy had been exposed to the gentlemanly contempt of his associates.

Once Harold, after a gay afternoon with his friends, had blundered into his mother's boudoir to find Anne, working alone at her desk.

"Beg pard'n," he said, thickly. "Mister—looking for this mister."

"She hasn't returned from shopping," Anne informed him crisply.

"Miss Meadows, isn't it? Never noticed you before, Miss Meadows. Easy to look at—very, if you'll 'low me to say so. Fix up Pa, you'd be a stunner."

"I beg your pardon," said Anne frostily.

"Do'n mind me, Miss Meadows, jus' a rotter. Once a rotter, always a rotter. Fellows at school always called me 'soap.' Couldn't expect soap boiler to be gen'l'm'n, could you?"

Dreading further confidences, Anne had fled. Ever after that she was conscious of a feeling of the deepest pity for Harold. His strong young manhood waste he wasted because his parents, in their ignorance had not shown him the worthy things in life.

Mrs. Jonas-Gulick had beamed and swelled with pride when her son was received at Helen Cadwallader's house. The Cadwalladers were the oldest stock in town. They mated, if they chose, with nobility, and occasionally even with royalty itself.

"Dear, dear girl," gushed the aristocrat. "How I shall love having her for a daughter." Her affectionate ardor knew no damping, even though haughty Helen went out of her way to scuff the aspiring mother-in-law. After a few weeks of the novelty of Harold's handsome face and reckless ways, however, the blase Helen had cut him dead. The youth had returned to his old, aimless manner of life.

Father Jonas-Gulick was called, at this crisis, to leave his stocks, his clubs and his committees to go into executive session with his tearful wife.

"I fear," he accused her, tight lipped, "that you've spoiled Harold beyond redemption."

"Oh, Amos!" wailed his wife. "Don't say that."

"Can you see any way to redeem him, then?" he demanded.

Pats at the moment answered the question for Harold's mother. Anne, appearing at the door at that moment, murmured an apology and departed. Mrs. Jonas-Gulick suddenly ceased mopping her eyes.

"Anne," she cried. "Miss Meadows—I have it!"

"Miss who? What!" asked Amos.

"The person who just came to the door, my secretary, Miss Meadows. Don't you see, what Harold needs to give him an interest in life is an affair with some young woman! Miss Meadows could do it, if she would. We could send her away if the affair became dangerous."

Amos shook his head positively. "Not very thing!" he pronounced. Perhaps a little competition is all that's needed to win Helen back Cadwalladers.

When Anne was told of her part of the plan to save the heir apparent from destruction, she at first indignantly refused to have anything to do with the matter. Yielding, however, to her employer's tearful pleadings, she finally consented.

"You understand, of course," stipulated Pa Jonas-Gulick, "that the affair is not to go too far—I mean," he hastened to explain to the outraged Anne, "that there is to be no thought of marriage. The family would not for an instant entertain such a thought as Harold's marrying without his father's consent."

"Your family is taking a good deal for granted," Anne retorted with unexpected spirit.

"In fact," he added, "I should, in that case, disinherit him."

The experiment, from the start, bid fair to be a success. By deft suggestion Harold was led once to take Anne to the theatre. He repeated the experience, took her in addition to luncheons, cabarets and sporting events of his set. He found his mother's secretary such an interesting companion that his troubles seemed far behind. Harold's mother began to be alarmed.

"Better send her away, now," the father advised. "She has accomplished our purpose."

Mrs. Jonas-Gulick, therefore, found some errand on which to send her son, in order that he might not be near to frustrate her plans. When the time was ripe, she called Anne into the library.

"Miss Meadows," she began, tactfully, "don't you think you are overdoing matters a little?"

"I am sure I don't know what you mean by that," Anne stated. "I am just doing what you asked me to."

"Perhaps you meant no harm. But you know, Miss Meadows, Harold is not free to marry where his fancy leads him. We have our plans for him; if he spoiled them—well, you yourself, heard his father say he'd cut him off with a dollar."

"I've seem to think that young Mr. Jonas-Gulick has only to whistle," said Anne contemptuously, "and that I will proceed to break my neck following him. Has it ever entered your head that I might entertain objections to marrying into your family?"

"You! A mere nobody! How very amusing!"

"Well, not exactly a nobody. The fact is that my folks were man of influence in the colony of Virginia, when the Gulicks were still hoeing cabbages along the Rhine."

"The Meadowses of Virginia! Impossible!"

Anne shrugged. "That, however, is beside the question. The point now to be considered is that of getting a successor to me. Having collected all the necessary information, I am returning home at once to begin my book on the newly rich in New York."

Harold at this moment, came into the room. "I rather imagined you had something up your sleeve, Mater, of I sent one of the help on your errand, Mother has been at you, I see, Anne, to make you leave her precious boy alone. I'm afraid that rather messe things. You'll regret your bargain—about marrying me, I mean."

"No," said Anne. "But I'm going to hold your father to his agreement. He must disinherit you, before I'll consider you at all. His money wouldn't be good for you. You must earn some for yourself."

"Agreed," cried Harold. "Anything you say, so you don't give me the gate."

FOXY GRANDPA'S BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

BUNNY certainly looked dejected. If ever there was a sad looking rabbit it was Bunny. He didn't sit up straight and his ears were flopping, and he lost that smart debonair air which his whiskers always give him when they bristle—like a gentleman with a waxed mustache.

"Bunny," I said, "you have something on your mind besides those long silky ears. Tell me about it. Perhaps I can help you."

"Foxy Grandpa there's going to be a massacre around here."

"What under the sun are you talking about, Bunny?" I asked.

"Last night I overheard this farmer talking to his foreman. He said that something had to be done about the field mice which were out in the cornfield, and that he wanted his foreman to scatter poison all over the wield and exterminate them entirely."

"Now, Foxy Grandpa, those poor field mice have an awful life. Every cat in the neighborhood is after them, and they're not only attacked from the ground but they are always in danger from an air attack."

"What do you mean by air attack Bunny?" I asked.

"Owie," hissed Bunny.

"Don't you know that owls are just like flying cats and that one owl will gobble up forty mice in an hour?"

"Mercy," I said. "Those little fellows are up against it and the sad thing is that they do a great deal of good even if they may eat a little grain or corn. Field mice did a great work in Russia once."

"What was that!" asked Bunny eagerly.

"It was some years ago near Odessa in Southern Russia where the great wheat fields are.

"Suddenly one day as if they had fallen from the sky, appeared hundreds and thousands of tiny field mice. They swarmed over the country and people couldn't understand where they had come from or why they had come.

"But in some mysterious way those little mice had discovered that there was going to be a plague of locusts which would have entirely destroyed the crop—far worse than the mice would have.

"It was found that there were millions of locust eggs hung in the little sacks in which they are laid on all the grain and if they had hatched the spring crop would have been a total loss and all of the farmers would have been very poor.

"But the little mice got busy and ate up all the eggs because locust eggs are one of their favorite dishes. The ones they couldn't eat, they stored for the Winter. So you see, they really saved that whole part of the country from a great catastrophe."

Open sores on leg for more than year

Resinol healed in few weeks

"Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 24:—"I have been troubled with running sores on my leg for a year or more and all the medical attention and treatments I tried did no good. One day I saw an advertisement for Resinol Ointment in the newspaper and I bought a jar of it. In less than three weeks my sores were healed up and have been well ever since. As my wife has been sick for nearly a year and had bed sores we induced her to try this salve and the sores are healing splendidly. I have bought several jars of it and believe me it will always be on the shelf in my bath room." (Signed) Alfred E. Baur, 1014 Monroe St.

Frank Dewar, county jailer, has issued an order prohibiting prisoners from using cuss words.

Is it really necessary to torture prisoners in this manner?

Furthermore, Frank Dewar was one of the best top sergeants in the Canadian army.

When a former top sergeant goes on record against cussing, it merely shows that the country is slipping into a state of unpreparedness.

"SAVE to have" croaks the pessimist. "Save for a Rainy Day. It's just around the corner. Croak!" While the practical optimist, after looking into the question of how people live as well as they live without overspending, observes: "Save to spend wisely. Save to get the most out of it. # ARBORETUM IS BIG BOSTON ASSET

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Arnold Arboretum at Forest Hills, the world's largest collection of trees and shrubs, is a big asset for Boston. Properly exploited, as it was under the administrations of former Mayor Fitzgerald, it would be still more widely known and thus more of a drawing card for this city. Former Mayor Fitzgerald never failed to draw attention to this surprising beautiful "spoke of the Hub."

Now the National House agriculture committee has voted unanimously to report the bill filed by Congressman Robert Luce of Massachusetts to establish a national arboretum at Mt. Hamilton, near Anacostia, Washington.

Robert Luce

More than 2,000 acres would be taken for the purpose, if the bill should become law. The legislation, understood to be agreeable to President Coolidge, will carry an appropriation of $300,000 and is supported by many organizations of conservation and Audubon societies.

Congressman Luce, by the way, is one of the few business men in Washington today. He has fought to guard the public against being handed a poor quality of coal. If you burn coal, you should appreciate this.

* * *

Five years ago Congressman Luce performed a representative act that saved the taxpayers the amount of his salary for many generations. By securing amendments to the Federal Farm Loan measure, he prevented the tying up of about $19,-000,000. He threw himself, Sherlock-like, into the battle just when an agreement detrimental to the interests of the taxpayers was imminent.

Clergymen's Sons Wicked?

No, Good as Gold, and "Go-Getters"

Sons of clergymen gathered recently to honor Thomas W. Lamont, who is a clergyman's son, and a partner in J. P. Morgan & Company.

It used to be said that clergymen's sons amounted to little. Some even said they were wild, because they had to sow not only THEIR OWN wild oats, but also wild oats that their fathers HADN'T sowed.

This, you will be glad to learn, is all wrong. The men in "Who's Who" are, 11 per cent. of them, sons of clergymen.

It isn't necessary, as was once thought, for every man to eat in his life a peck of dirt, and it isn't necessary for a clergyman's son to get into a peck of trouble.

E. H. Harriman, biggest railroad man this country has had except old Vanderbilt and James J. Hill, was a clergyman's son.

Sons of clergymen, at least 90 per cent. of them, respect their fathers. And that's the best start a boy can have in life.

Boys with good mothers and self-respecting fathers that set a good example, usually go STRAIGHT.

Yes, M'Lady

It has a VERY Sweet Sound

Extremists in the British Labor party have mapped out a great program and say, "We shall achieve Socialism in our time."

That depends on your definition of socialism. Public parks, free libraries, hospitals, magnificent country clubs, great ocean steamships available to all. They would have been called "socialism" two hundred years ago. They are achieved.

Other things "socialistic" will be achieved as men of power gradually begin to take more interest in their fellowmen and less interest in money they don't need.

But the human race will continue to go upstairs one step at a time. Any "extremist" who hopes to take one hundred steps at a time will be disappointed.

Lady Cynthia Mosely, who thinks she is an extreme Laborite, says she really couldn't give up her title. She doesn't use it herself, and other Laborites call her "Comrade Cynthia." But Cynthia's grandfather, old Leiter, of Chicago, had common sense. She inherits it, and keeps the title, "Yes, My Lady," from the lower classes, although it is much more soothing than "Hello, Comrade Cynthia."

The Flames or the Worms?

We Cling to Our Poor Bodies

Mr. Lloyd Phoenix, in his lifetime, sailed more than 100,000 miles in his three schooner yachts. Having no work to do, he liked to think himself a sailor.

A few days ago his ashes were scattered over the water in the path of the world yacht races. A last salute from a firing squad, a prayer by the Reverend Moore, Navy chaplain, and the ashes settled down, to settle at the bottom of the ocean with the meteoric dust, constantly falling there.

It is hard for men to part with their poor bodies. The ancients had them mummified that they might last. Moderns build for their bodies fine mausoleums with money they can no longer spend for gayer things.

Some decide to be burned, and order their ashes scattered appropriately. Others shudder at the thought of fire for their bodies, forgetting that slow worms are worse than quick fire.

If Lloyd Phoenix had lived fifty years later he would have had his ashes scattered six miles up in the air, in the path of future AIR YACHT races.

No Turkish Treaty?

Not OUR Business

One hundred and ten Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church have sent to every member of the United States Senate a protest against the treaty that the League of Nations is making with the Turks.

The Turks kill Christians, say the good Bishops, and therefore the League of Nations should have nothing to do with them.

That is perfectly true, although Christians also kill Turks now and then. For instance, in the Crimean war. The good Bishops should know that what the League of Nations does is no part of UNCLE SAM'S business. He should keep out of the League of Nations and allow that body and the Turks to settle their own affairs.

We have trouble enough looking after one hundred and fifteen million people within our own boundaries.

The Seven Tailors

And the Grand Dukes

In Paris, Grand Dukes, their relatives and others that left Russia hurriedly when Lenin and Trotzky took charge are holding a solemn gathering. They choose a successor to the vanished Czar, and decide what government Russia shall have "when Bolshevism is driven out." Nothing as interesting as that has been seen since the Seven Tailors of Tooley Street issued their pronunciamento beginning "We the people of England."

Plain Language

It's a Gift

The Reverend Dr. Harris A. D. Kirk, of Baltimore's Franklin Street Presbyterian Church, who refused a call to avenue, New York, puts solemn truth in few words. American adults have never grown up, and business of this country, amazingly wise by day, are amazing by night."

REFORM IN CALENDAR IS SUGGESTED

By Garrett P. Servis,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

IN these ambitious times it is not surprising that in many enterprising minds lurks a project of improving on the long-standing work of Julius Caesar and Pope Gregory XIII. by means of a new reform of the calendar.

A number of individuals and associations are turning over various plans and throwing out occasional straws to see where sits the wind of public favor in this matter. If such a reform should go through it would have worldwide consequences stamped upon human affairs for thousands of years to come. In truth, it might be made so thorough that the calendar would never need changing again to the end of the days of man.

Among the schemes for this reform that I have seen none seems more attractive than one outlined by Professor Albert Luther Canby of the University of Nebraska, in a letter to "Science," and I think that many readers will be interested in a restatement of it.

Beginning with the obvious objection to the proposal which has been made to divide the year into thirteen months of twenty-eight days each, that it makes the number of months a prime number (a number that can only be divided by unity), whereas twelve is ideal for the number of months, because it is divisible into several equal parts, convenient for business purposes, Professor Canby shows how a very simple form of calendar, which would have the advantage of being also a "perpetual calendar," could be made by slight changes in the calendar now used.

He would retain 12 as the number of months, and would continue to divide the year into four quarters containing three months each. But he would have the first month of each quarter, beginning with January, consist of 31 days, while all the other eight months would contain 30 days each, including February. At present we have seven months of 31 days each, four of 30 each and one of 28 or 29, according as the year is or is not leap year.

In redistributing the days among the months, he would take one from March and one from August and give them to February. One day from May would be given to April, December's 31st day would be made independent under the name "New Year's Day." Then, in leap year an extra day would be interjected in the middle of the year, to be called "Midsummer Holiday," or something of that kind. The provision of these independent days for New Year's and leap year is common to most of the proposed plans.

Now, let us see what we get if we follow out Professor Canby's plan. Suppose the change should be made, as the suggests, the next time that the 1st of January falls on Monday. Then we should have the year and the days of the week arranged as follows: (I give only one three months quarter to show the method. You can continue the table to the end of the year, and you will find no change in the subsequent quarters.)

The leader of the next quarter will be April, and it will begin with Monday and have thirty-one days, like January. Observe that not only does the 1st of January always fall on Monday, but that Monday is also the first day of every one of the four quarters. The second month of each quarter always begins with Thursday, and the third month of each quarter always begins with Saturday. The first day of the month would never fall on Sunday.

Professor Canby also calls attention to the fact that an obligation running for three months, or any multiple of three months, would always fall due on the same day of the week. Those who are accustomed to dealing with commercial paper will find many admirably convenient features in a calendar of this form, and its inventor seems to be right in affirming that its adoption would involve no radical or confusing change. Making what is now December 31 New Year's Day presents no obvious objection, and the midsummer Leap Year's day appears equally innocent and, indeed, rather alluring.

STIMULATE, DO NOT GOAD IMAGINATION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE trouble with most writing and stage productions is that they stifle the imagination by overloading it.

There are those who hold that it is better to read a play than to see it acted, for when you read your imagination can picture the scene, whereas when you see the play all the work of your imagination is done for you.

A moderate suggestion to the imagination is better than too great a one.

The Orientals understand this, and their scenery in the play is of a suggestive kind and is not realistic. For instance, when a boat is to be depicted a real boat is not brought on the stage, but some contraption that can suggest a boat.

A little girl gets more fun out of an old rag doll than she does out of a fancy doll that can open and shut its eyes and conceals a phonograph which talks.

A boy gets quite as much fun out of riding astraddle of a broomstick and calling it a horse as he would out of riding a horse.

A great part of the fun of any kind of play consists in using the imagination, and like every other faculty, the imagination gets more pleasure when it is stimulated to activity than when it is loaded down by outside pressure.

It is better for the health to take exercise than to have massage. It is better to make your own exercise than to have someone make it for you.

In the same way it is better to use your own imagination than to use that of someone else.

This has a distinct reference to style, for a style is better that is full of suggestions than one which is full of descriptions.

Let the mind do its own flying and do not carry it in the aeroplane of your own abundant talk.

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "A TIP ON A LADY'S LIPS"

MOST girls MAKE UP their LIPS to look like "A MOUTH";
A FEW make them to Look like "LIPS."
The LAST are ARTISTS, and
THEY achieve their effect
By making the TOP LIP
DARKER than the lower one.
Talking of lips,
WHERE DOES ALL THE LIP
STICK GO that disappears
Off the PRETTY LADIES' LIPS?
Do THEY swallow it,
Or do OTHERS?
And if THEY don't lick it
Off or WIPE it off,
WHERE DOES IT DISAPPEAR?

Of course, at a MEAL
One is liable to see
A SPOON delicately
TINTED by the LIPS
That EMBRACED it,
But THAT does not
Account for the HALF
OF IT. It seems
It is the FASHION
For the MODERN Girl to Put on a NEW PAIR OF LIPS every time she
Dances, and during the night
She must make a lot of FUNNY
IMPRESSIONS on the men.
So THEY might CLEAR UP
SOME of the mystery.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

IF you had an eighteen-year-old boy, would you give your consent to his marriage to a widow of forty-three?

An Oregon man did exactly that the other day and then acted as best man when his son married the lady in question.

And on the same day another boy was saved from a long penitentiary sentence, and given a boy's term instead, because his father testified that the boy, twenty, had been made morally irresponsible by his marriage to a woman of fifty-three. Just what the father was doing when his minor son committed this act the record does not state. However, the father now claims that the effort to live with and support the woman brought the boy to such a pass that he passed the bad checks which caused his arrest. The argument so convinced the judge that the boy husband was given a shorter sentence.

Will the first young man's romance, abetted by his father, end as disastrously as the one which threatened to have prison stripe complications?

We hate to blight a honeymoon with gloomy forecasts, but we're willing to bet our last Winter's umbrella against your new Spring bonnet that it does!

May and December matings are abnormal things at best, and nearly always unhappy. And when December happens to be a lady and May a mister, you might just as well prepare to duck the storm. You might survive the two well-known risks of sassing a policeman or kicking a bulldog, but there isn't even a margin of chance left when sonny marries a grandma.

Quite Another Story

Of course there are males who don't want a wife at all, but who crave a nice affectionate governess all their lives, just as there are males who like to make the mayonnaise dressing or do embroidery or use perfumed salts in their bath water. But we're not discussing such mishaps on the part of Mamma Nature. We're talking about regular He Men, albeit rather raw ones. Nothing more disastrous could happen to a normal boy than to marry a woman several years older than himself.

"But girls constantly marry men who are from five to ten years older than themselves and are perfectly happy."

That's quite another story. A girl of eighteen or twenty and a boy of the same age are vastly different. The girl is already much older than the boy. She is not older in intellectual power, but she's far older in "sense." She knows herself and her world better. A girl matures much sooner than a boy. Her personality "sets" sooner.

Most girls are ready for marriage at twenty. They are eager to have homes. They adjust themselves without too great difficulties to the home program. But the boy of twenty is unfit for marriage. He's emotionally unstable. He isn't sure of himself. He's apt to crumble or grow peevish under responsibility. Nor is it his fault. Modern marriage is too big a job for a boy of twenty to tackle. He should live at least five years more before he's ripe enough for the task. And even then marriage will not have the binding lure for him that it has for the girl. He'll want to be married—in order to get the girl. But he won't want to be married in order to be married.

Takes Hard Work

A woman must work twice as hard to keep a husband happy in marriage as a man must work to keep a wife. She must make him feel that both her companionship and the marital state add materially to the value of his life. She must impress her need of guidance and protection upon him in a hundred subtle ways, and build up his self-respect by showing her respect for him. And she must always make him feel that he has triumphed over his whole sex by winning her.

She must do this because she's really putting something over on him that nature never intended should be put over—she's making a married man out of a misogamist male.

She can only do all this if she, herself, really enjoys the same things that he enjoys—if she thinks from the same age angle—and if she's still young enough to excite his interest and stimulate his pride.

But if she has outlived his interest, and by her own experience makes his appear trivial, how much of a chance has she got?

Notta chance!

QUESTION OF LOAN BETWEEN FRIENDS SHOWS YOU

There was a time in your life when you needed money badly.

You looked down your list of supposed friends and could not find one to whom you felt you could go with your story and ask for help.

Or perhaps you have had the experience that many others have had—that of going to supposed friends for help and being faced with a question as to what security you could give for money loaned.

That question of security between friends rather shocked you.

They wanted security you could not produce and then you were told of the many enterprises in which they were engaged which took all their capital.

And you thought of other times when you were sailing along easily and many of these same people had told you of how they always kept a little money ahead.

But they would not jeopardize their financial standing to help you.

If the tables were turned would you do that much for a friend?

If so, what friend?
